WOMAN, ALIVE, FOUND AMONG THE DEAD IN THE EXCURSION HORROR

CORONER BEGINS A SECRET QUEST

Death List May Reach 1,200---Charges Made That Fire Appliances Were Useless and Insufficient, Life Belts Non-Buoyant, and the Crew Negligent and Cowardly---Pastor Haas Goes Insane.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

NEW YORK, JUNE 16.—A STAR CHAMBER INVESTIGATION TO FIX RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE APPALLING DISASTER ON THE EXCURSION STEAMER GENERAL SLOCUM WAS BEGUN TO-DAY BY CORONER BERRY. CAPTAIN VAN SCHAICK AND THE TWO PILOTS, HELD PRISONERS AT LINCOLN HOSPITAL, WERE THE FIRST WITNESSES.

Newspaper men were denied access by the orders of the Coroner. As fast as survivors of the wreck can be found they are taken before Coroner Berry and their statements recorded. The Coroner says he will probe thoroughly the charges that the crew were negligent, the fire apparatus useless and the provisions for life saving antiquated and inadequate.

WOMAN ALIVE AMONG DEAD.

A WOMAN, TAGGED AS ONE OF THE IDENTIFIED DEAD, AND LYING WITH A HEAP OF TARPAULIN COVERED BODIES IN THE IMPROVISED MORGUE AT THE ALEXANDER AVENUE STATION, WAS FOUND TO BE ALIVE. A WOMAN SEARCHING FOR RELATIVES AMONG THE DEAD NOTICED THE WOMAN, MISS CLARA HARTMAN, WAS BREATHING, AND CALLED A SURGEON.

SHE WAS REMOVED FROM THE MORGUE AND LAID ON A COUCH WHILE THE SURGEON APPLIED RESTORATIVES. IN A FEW MINUTES HER BREATHING BECAME REGULAR AND TRANQUIL. SHE OPENED HER EYES, GAZED AROUND HER FOR A FEW MINUTES AND THEN SANK INTO SLUMBER. THE SURGEONS SAY HER LIFE WILL BE SAVED.

The ghastly search among the heaps of dead to identify the victims of the disaster was continued to-day. Many of the survivors of the disaster have become raving maniacs. The pastor of

EXPERTS WILL BATTLE OVER TUCKER'S FATE

PRISONER PLEADS NOT GUILTY; LAWYERS WILL CALL SCIENCE TO AID THEM.

The trial of Charles L. Tucker, who was arraigned to-day in the Middlesex County Superior Court, to plead to the indictment charging the murder of Mabel Page, and to which he pleaded "Not guilty" in a firm voice, is to be a battle of experts.

The first move of the lawyers for the defence, who, it is expected, will be the firm of Vahey & Innes, will be to file a petition for the furnishing of experts as good as can be obtained in the State to offset the testimony that will be given by Professor Wood, who has been retained by the prosecution. This application will probably be made on Monday. Although Judge Lawton did not announce whom he would appoint as counsel at to-day's hearing, Tucker requested that the same lawyers that have appeared for him be appointed. The appointment is expected to be announced this afternoon.

New Evidence Mysterious.

No date for the trial has yet been set, Early next week Chief Justice Mason, District Attorney Sanderson and Tucker's counsel will meet and arrange the time. Everybody interested desires as early a date as possible. There is one other murder trial that will probably take precedence, and this will bring Tucker to the bar probably about the last of September.

The evidence that the State believes to be so important, it was learned to-day, is not a paper bag found in the Page house, but something of a different nature, which it has guarded so jealously that the defence cannot conjecture what it is.

It is believed to be one of two things—it is something that was found in the Page house that the State believes it can trace directly to Tucker, or it is a new witness upon whom it will depend to prove that Tucker was either in the Page house on the day of the murder or nearer than has so far been shown.

Defence Relies on Alibi.

The chief feature of the defence, as shown in the BOSTON AMERICAN last Sunday, will be an alibi. Letters from

RUSSIANS SINK 2 JAP TRANSPORTS

Five Hundred and Fifty of the Survivors Reach the Shore.

WAS SKRYDLOFF'S WORK

TOKIO, June 16.—The doubts as to the authenticity of the reported sinking of the transports Hitachi and Sado by Russian warships in Corea strait have been removed.

Three hundred and ninety-seven of the survivors of the former transport and 153 from the latter have reached shore.

RUSS ROUTED WITH 800 LOSS

LONDON, June 16.—A Tokio dispatch says that the Russians have been beaten with 500 killed, 300 captured and 14 guns taken in a fight at Telissu, eighty miles north of Port Arthur. The Japanese losses are estimated at 1,000 killed and wounded.

An official dispatch to-day at St. Petersburg states that the fighting between the Russians and Japanese at Vafangow, Liao Tung peninsula, continues. The Russian losses on June 14, says the dispatch, were two Generals wounded, twenty officers and 200 men killed and wounded.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 16.—A dispatch to the Maritime Exchange from Cape Henry states that a quantity of burned wreckage, cabin furniture, several five gallon cases of oil and a passenger check of the Ocean Steamship Company of Savannah has been washed ashore between False Cape and Currituck Life-Saving Station. the church, the Rev. George C. F. Haas, who was in charge of the excursion, has been removed from Lincoln Hospital to his home, hopelessly insane. The bodies of his wife and daughter, killed in the fire, are in the house.

"1,200" IS DEATH ROLL.

The horror of the disaster grows hourly. Health Commissioner Darlington says that the number of dead will reach 1,200. Five hundred and thirty-nine bodies have been recovered, but only 165 have been identified. The greater number are so hopelessly charred and blackened that identification is impossible.

Each hour adds to the list of dead. Divers are at work bringing bodies from the sunken hull of the burned steamer. Bodies are being washed ashore on North Brothers and Rikers islands and picked up by boats in the river.

LIFE BELTS ROTTEN, UNTESTED.

The charge that the life belts on the steamer were rotten and crumbled when taken from their fastenings is made. The inspectors have admitted that these life belts were never tested to ascertain their buoyancy.

Captain Van Schaick is blamed for running the steamer against the breeze for half a mile to North Brothers island instead of beaching her at Port Morris.

The police have had difficulty in preventing the robbery of the dead. Ghouls added their hideous presence to the horror of last night, and but for searchlights and the vigilance of the police they would have reaped a harvest.

$200,000 TAKEN FROM BODIES.

Jewelry, cash and bankbooks representing $200,000 have been taken from the bodies of victims by Coroner O'Gorman, and are held for identification. In the clothing of one well-dressed woman was found bankbooks calling for $4,000.

More than one hundred bodies, burned to a crisp, are yet in the black and smouldering hull of the General Slocum.

Besides the killed, 500 or more were burned or bruised. The hospitals are filled with suffering survivors of the wreck.

WHOLE FAMILIES WIPED OUT.

Hundreds of homes in New York are places of desolation to-day. Many are vacant entirely, whole families having been wiped out of existence.

All night long the river in the vicinity of the place where the hulk was beached was patrolled, and body after body was recovered. Electric lights had been rigged hastily to cast their glow upon the rippling water, and Fire Chief Croker sent a fireboat with a searchlight to aid in illuminating the dark spots along the shore.

District-Attorney Jerome would not disclose the plan he would pursue in fixing the blame for the catastrophe and investigating the charge that the life preservers were rotten. He said that for the present he would co-operate with Coroners Berry and O'Gorman.

Supervising Inspector-General George Uhler, at Washington, D. C., has directed the local corps of supervisors to make an exhaustive inquiry into the disaster, with particular reference to the matter of life preservers, which Inspector Radle's department pronounced safe last month.

Hundreds of grief-crazed parents and relatives chartered tugs and went to North Brothers Island this morning to watch the work of rescue and the bringing in of the bodies that are being washed ashore. Few of the bodies that have remained in the water over night are recognizable, except by the remnants of

Finding Bodies by Hundred at Bottom

By Publishers' Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—About 250 feet from the New York shore, off the place known as Hunts' Point, the upper part of a paddle box, two smoke stacks, a scorched flagstaff and some twisted and bent iron work, all sticking out of the water at an angle of forty-five degrees, be the remnants of the ill-fated steamboat General Slocum. It is a temporary and hideous monument at the scene where near ly 1,200 persons, the great bulk of whom were women and children, lost their lives in fire and water.

To-day there are grave murmurings and charges that this terrible sacrifice of life was needless—that the officers of the boat, though their bravery is admired, erred when they drove the burning vessel for half a mile before beaching her, that the life belts were rotten and unserviceable, and that the construction of the upper works of the boat was faulty, inasmuch as they were all of wood and gave a free sweep to the flames. This latter complaint is true of steamboats all over the country. There is no law providing that super structures should be built of steel, but with the Slocum horror as a terrible lesson, it will not be surprising if such a steamboat regulation were adopted.

Covered with Mist.

Long Island Sound this morning was covered with a thick white mist that settled around the wreck of the Slocum as if in an endeavor to cover the horror spot with a huge white mantle. All through the night wrecking tugs hovered about the wreck, but the work of taking out bodies, which had been suspended at midnight, was not resumed until the sun was well up in the heavens.

Half a dozen divers were at work this morning, led by John Rice, the hero of the Boonton catastrophe, in which Diver Olsen lost his life. Every now and then the people on shore would see a man, in a weird-looking suit, slip over the side of a tug and sink to the bottom. When he returned he would have a blackened, dripping figure in his arms, a victim of the disaster.

As a diver brought a body to the surface a grappling hook was placed under it and it was raised to the tug. Generally these bodies were burned beyond recognition. When several bodies were recovered a city tug would steam alongside and the dead were transferred. There a coroner would tag and number the corpses, after which they were placed in plain white wooden boxes. When a load was secured the tug would steam through the sound into the East River and down to the foot of East Twenty-sixth street, where the pier had been transformed into a temporary morgue.

Police Find Bodies.

Out on the Sound, about North Brothers, South Brothers and Rikers Islands, there were numerous small boats, manned by police and volunteer watermen. They were constantly finding bodies, which were taken to North Brothers Island and there given in charge of the proper authorities.

The number of dead, even now, can only be estimated. Health Commissioner Darlington, who was at the scene all day yesterday and has watched the horror in all its details, says the victims will number at least 1,200. Five hundred bodies have been recovered. District Attorney Jerome has engaged Fire Marshal Freel to assist him in making an investigation into the cause of the accident.

Heartbreaking Scenes.

The scenes at the morgue were heart-breaking, and defied description. Tragedy was even written on the faces of the morgue attendants, who, whatever their feelings may be, never show them. All night and to-day hundreds of men, women and children with faces drawn in grief and blanched with horror, passed between the lines of dead looking for their lost ones.

Fifty police, under the direction of Inspector Brooks, assisted the relatives and friends in their work of finding the dead. Now and then a little party of searchers halted before a corpse, believing that they had found their own, only to pass on again to look elsewhere. Many of the dead were burned and charred beyond recognition, and sometimes an identification was effected by a piece of clothing or a ring. Many will have to be buried without identification because of their indecorated condition.

St. Mark's German Lutheran Church, the parishioners of which hired the General Slocum, stands on East Sixth street, between the Bowery and Second avenue. It drew its attendance from the territory bounded by East Houston street on the south, the Bowery on the west, East Fourteenth street on the north and Avenue A on the east. The district is old-fashioned and its population has shown little change, so far as nationality and characteristics go, for many years. Thrifty Germans and their descendants have made it their home for fifty years.

Mother Greets Child.

An idea of the terrible strain under which the people labored may be obtained from incidents in the neighborhood. Late last night a crowd of tearful, frantic women rushed toward a young woman who alighted, bandaged and burned, from a Second avenue surface car at Sixth street. A child put his arm about her and half carried her to the curb. One white-haired woman in the crowd rushed to the girl's side and clutched at her shoulder. With painful effort the girl turned her head. A glad cry escaped the old woman.

"Thank God," she cried, "you are here."

The girl put her arms about the old woman's neck and uttered the one word, "Mother."

The crowd cheered and then assisted the reunited ones to their home nearby.

Captain Defends Himself.

After his terrible experience Captain William N. Van Schaick, of the ill-fated General Slocum, lies in Lebanon Hospital, a prisoner.

In reply to the charges that he might have saved scores of lives had he beached his vessel immediately after the fire was discovered, instead of running her up the river for nearly a mile to North Brothers Island, Captain Van Schaick said to-day:

"I know that I could have saved some time by running into the docks on the west shore of the river, but I did not do this because I feared that the burning ship might cause one of the big gas tanks on the river front to explode. If I did wrong in making the longer run to North Brothers Island, I have a lifetime to regret it. I did what I thought at the time was best."

Damages Bound by the Value of Slocum Hulk

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Under the laws of the United States the surviving relatives of the victims of the General Slocum disaster have practically no chance to recover anything from the owners of the boat, even though it can be shown that the employes of the Knickerbocker Steamboat Company were negligent, and that the captain did wrong in running his boat a mile and a half before beaching.

All the interest the heirs and assigns of the dead have in any claim they might make against the Knickerbocker Steamboat Company is limited to the value of the hulk of the General Slocum as it lies under water off Ricker's Island. There is nothing left of the Slocum of more value than as junk.

Mr. E. G. Benedict, of the firm of Benedict & Benedict, the noted admiralty lawyers, said:

"The owners of the General Slocum are liable for damages only to the value of the ship at the end of her voyage. To all intents and purposes the General Slocum ended her voyage at the bottom of Long Island Sound between North Brother and Rikers Islands. The point is covered in section 4,283 of the revised statutes of the United States, which reads as follows:

"The liability of the owners of any vessel for any act matter or thing, loss, damage or forfeiture done occasioned or incurred without privity or knowledge of the owner, shall in no case exceed the amount of the value of the interest of such owner in such vessel and her freight then pending."

SPOTTED FEVER RAGES.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 16.—Professor Charles A. Lindsley, secretary of the State Board of Health, says that spotted fever continues to be epidemic in and about Hartford. In April sixty-five cases were reported and in May seventy-one. The death rate is between 60 and 70 per cent.

Girl, Thought Dead, Wakes, Tells Story

NEW YORK, June 16.—One of the miracles of the disaster was the reawakening to life of Clara Hartman, a young woman of No. 209 East Tenth street, after she had been picked up burned and apparently drowned and being towed in the rear of a launch from the side of the wreck of the Slocum to the shore of Manhattan.

Wrapped in a tarpaulin, the seemingly lifeless body of Miss Hartman, who is twenty years old, was placed with a row of twenty-nine dead in the Alexander avenue station.

Fully three hours had elapsed from the time of the fire to the hour when Miss Hartman's body was conveyed to the station house, and another hour passed before the startling discovery was made that life still remained in the body of the young woman.

It was a strange woman who had volunteered her services in aiding the police to obtain identifying marks of the women dead, who made the startling discovery, and her presence, every one said, after the remarkable development, was regarded by those present as an inspiration.

WOMAN MAKES DISCOVERY.

Had this particular woman not happened on the scene at the particular moment, Miss Hartman would have been placed in the dead wagon and carried to the Morgue, with an attendant coterie of a score of corpses. Selecting the women dead for her inspection, the unknown woman had examined several, when she came to the form of the young woman, wrapped in the tarpaulin, in which some tender-hearted person had enveloped her body. Unwrapping the folds of the death sheet, the unknown woman began to take an inventory of the seemingly dead woman's effects, clothing and physical description. There was something in the appearance of the body which caused the examiner to pause, she afterward said, although she entertained not the slightest idea that life still existed. She hesitated over the body. Undoing the corset at the front, and while making a minute examination of the underclothing, the woman started up with the exclamation, "This woman is alive!"

SURGEONS REVIVE HER.

"Quick," she exclaimed to a surgeon. "Hurry! This woman is alive!"

In an instant three surgeons were at work over the apparently dead form, and with their efforts unmistakable evidences of life were observed. Presently the woman gave a deep breath; then came the regular breathing, long and heavy; and when Miss Hartman had been carried to a comfortable couch, fashioned by blankets, she opened her eyes, restored to consciousness. No hysteria accompanied her return to her senses. She gazed into the faces of those surrounding her and then faintly raised her voice.

She said something, not quite audible, to those nearest her and then she closed her eyes. Another examination by the doctors convinced them that there was every chance of saving the young woman's life, and she was hurriedly but tenderly taken to Lincoln Hospital.

JAPANESE TURN RUSSIAN FLANK

LONDON, June 16.—The Czar has received the following dispatch from General Kuropatkin, dated June 15:

"An engagement occurred June 14 at Wai-Fang-Teng (north of Port Arthur) with a Japanese force numbering at least two divisions. Our losses in killed include Colonel Khoustenmur, commanding the First Regiment of Eastern Siberian Rifles, and Second Lieutenant Dragoleff Nadechinsky, adjutant of the regiment. The wounded include Major-General Gerngross, who remained in the field, and Captain Kristsky of the general staff. Twenty officers, whose names at present are unknown, were also killed or wounded, besides 311 soldiers, of which the First Regiment of Siberian Rifles lost twelve officers and 200 men and the First Brigade of Artillery six officers and fifty men.

"The following night was quiet until 2 a. m., when a fusillade began on our right flank, along the line of our outposts. The firing soon slackened. At 5:30 a. m. the Japanese artillery opened on our left flank. Shortly before this our cavalry discovered on our right flank the presence southward of Tafan-Chou of a considerable force of the enemy.

"The Japanese infantry opened fire on our cavalry, occupying the heights between Tafan-Chou and Lan-Chou, on the edge of a wood. Toward 6:30 o'clock the enemy, consisting of a regiment of infantry with artillery, attacked from these woods. At the same time the cannonade on our left flank became heavier.

"At 6:50 o'clock General Baron Stakelberg passed with part of his force to the attack, turning the right flank of the enemy toward Wai-Fang-Teng and Hun-Chou, and directing the other part of his force against the front. Toward 10 o'clock in the morning the enemy sent a brigade of infantry, cavalry and a battery of artillery against our right flank, and, having repulsed our detachments of cavalry, proceeded through Hun-Chou, turning the right flank of our position.

"General Stakelberg at 10:30 p. m. advanced his reserves to check this movement. According to information received the enemy during the morning of June 15 brought up considerable reinforcements and as the main Japanese force consists of upwards of three divisions."

The dispatch breaks off at this point.

Mother Struggles to Drown, Then Drinks Acid; Father Becomes Insane and Another Man Nearly Takes His Own Life.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The City Morgue at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street was a scene of horror to-day. Hundreds of relatives and friends of those who were on board the ill-fated steamer fought in grief-maddened desperation to gain admittance.

One mother to-day identified the burned body of her child, seized the little form and tried to jump into the river. Then she attempted to drink carbolic acid, but this was also prevented.

All night grief-stricken throngs had crowded the Morgue and other places where bodies are held, and since daylight their number have been steadily increasing. Added to them was a crowd of thousands, mostly women, who, according to the police, visited the scene out of morbid curiosity.

Picking Out the Dead.

The search by mothers who had lost children, fathers whose families were missing and young men and women seeking mothers and brothers was attended by scenes that beggared description. The only lights in the Morgue were lanterns and candles. Carrying these the Morgue attendants walked among the bodies, followed by hysterical relatives.

A piercing shriek would tell of an identification. Then policemen would carry out a fainting woman who had recognized a son or daughter or a sister or brother.

Fully 10,000 persons have passed the rows of bodies at the Morgue and the pier through the night. All heads were bared and a feeling of deep, silent sorrow prevailed.

Woman Attempts Suicide.

Picking out her ten-year-old daughter, Vanda, from among the dead on the pier this morning, Mrs. Lena Rosski, of 337 East Fifth street, tried to jump into the river with it. When several men seized her she drew forth a bottle containing carbolic acid and attempted to swallow the poison.

Again she was seized, but not before she had taken some of the acid. With her lips and mouth burned and pleading that she be allowed to die she was taken to Bellevue Hospital, while the body of her daughter was placed among the identified dead.

Father Goes Stark Mad.

A tiny baby form, so scarred as to be almost unrecognizable, lay on the pier. Suddenly a man sprang from the line and fell on the baby, crying the name of his child aloud.

He said she was his baby, May Ann Heckman, of No. 1,895, Third avenue. The mother had taken the baby on the excursion, and the mother was still missing. Heckman knew the baby by its clothes and some trinket about her neck.

His cries increased as he looked at the mangled face and suddenly he became a madman. Policemen carried him into Bellevue Hospital nearby, he calling wildly all the way for wife and baby.

Finds Bodies; Goes Crazy.

Charles Timm, of No. 211 East Fifth street, found the bodies of his wife, his daughter Henrietta, 18, and Hedwig, 12, and his son George, 10 years old, at the Morgue. When he saw them he lost his mind.

The sight that brought tears to every one, even the Morgue attendants, was that of two women who died clasping their infant babies to their arms.

The bodies of Mrs. Kate Ottinger, of 91 East Seventh street, and her children, Carrie and Emma, twins, aged sixteen, and Andrew and Arthur, were identified by her husband and her daughters, Lillian and Catherine. George Ottinger, another son, who was on the boat, escaped, but was sent to the Lincoln Hospital.

Walking silently up and down the pier where the bodies lie, a man supposed to be Henry Obermier, of No. 219 Sixth street, acted so suspiciously to-day that he was removed by his friends and the police. The man paced up and down, first wringing his hands and then wiping his eyes. He made no attempt to end his life, but the police were afraid that he might, and he was ordered off the pier.

Nothing to Live For.

When next seen he was in a boat tied to the pier gazing into the water. He was brought ashore and questioned and then turned over to his friends. The man was almost crazy.

His sister, Mrs. Nolt, he said, and her two children, were on board the Slocum and among the missing. "Now that they are dead," he said, "I have nothing to live for."

He was taken to his home.

At the morgue Mrs. Harry Weva was searching for her dead.

"I have three of them," she said, her eyes red with tears. "One of them down at the other end. Here's the other two."

"My God! But this is awful—awful," another woman sobbed.

"I shall go insane," said Mrs. Weva. "I know I shall. Just think, three in one day! How could such a thing happen? I shall die with grief. I know I shall."

Man Searches in Daze.

In a daze, Eugene Ansel came in, looking for his loved ones. He had heard nothing from his wife and two sons since they left home to take the General Slocum, and he was fearful of the worst.

He walked about, and finally coming to a coffin containing the body of his son, Alfred Ansel, he knelt down.

"Poor little boy! Poor little child!" he said in a voice heavy with sadness. "Why, oh, why did you go?"

There was another pathetic scene when Edward and Mary King identified the body of their sister, Catherine, of No. 214 East Forty-sixth street. Mary immediately knelt beside the coffin, brushed away some lee and placed the hands of the body in the attitude of prayer. Then taking a rose from her breast she placed it on the breast of her dead sister.

The gruesomeness of the morgue was accentuated by the steps of painters on the roof above. The clatter of their feet and their rattling of tin sounded weird in the doubtdome underneath.

PICKING UP BODIES NEAR THE SLOCUM.

(Copyright, 1904, by the American-Journal-Examiner.
(Photographed at the Scene of the Horror by an AMERICAN Photographer)

This was a frequent scene in the vicinity of where the Slocum was beached. Hundreds of bodies floated in the water and were dragged ashore by boatmen.

Another investigation was begun to-day by Coroner O'Gorman and District Attorney Jerome.

District Attorney Jerome said to-day:

"I cannot tell whether this terrible catastrophe was the result of an accident or due to a criminal carelessness or negligence, but this will be determined. If it is shown that this wholesale sacrifice of the lives of women and children is due to negligence on the part of any one on the Slocum, it will be met by the most vigorous prosecution that the District Attorney's office is capable of.

"One thing is made clear, and that is steamboats authorized to carry a large number of passengers ought to be made as nearly fireproof as are the modern steel and stone structures used as apartment houses.

CARNEGIE MEDALS TO SLOCUM HEROES?

PITTSBURG, June 16.—The instances of heroism in the East River disaster will not go unremembered. The officers of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, which was recently established with headquarters in this city, have talked over the affair, and Secretary Wilmot was instructed to make an investigation of the affair and report.

No promise is made or implied in this action of the officers. They have been placed in that position by Mr. Carnegie for the purpose of carrying out his wishes for the reward of living heroes and the support of those whom heroes leave desolate in case their brave efforts bring them death.

DIVERS SEARCH SLOCUM WRECK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The divers working on the wreck of the General Slocum resumed work this morning and hope to recover many bodies to-day. They had been compelled to stop work from midnight to daylight, owing to the strong tide and the rough sea.

A Merritt-Chapman wrecking tug, with full crew and three divers, is at the scene. Diver John Rice, who went to Boonton, N. J., and brought the body of Bill Hoar to the surface when others had failed to do so, arrived and volunteered his services.

The authorities at the Brooklyn Navy Yard were asked to help out, and they sent a powerful navy tug fitted up with searchlights. Five more bodies were recovered from the wreck just before midnight.

Worked All Through Night.

All through the gray dawn of to-day men in diving suits, others with grappling hooks in their hands, stood on the decks of tugs which hovered about the sunken wreck of the General Slocum, off Hunt's Point. Now and then a man in one of the weird-looking suits would slip over the side of the tug and sink to the bottom.

Then another diver would appear on the surface. Probably he had come to the surface for rest and air. Probably he held the body of a woman or the body of a child in his rubber-coated arms. The chances were that he had come up with the dead, for those divers felt no exhaustion as they groped about the bottom of the river among the dead.

As a diver could bring a body to the surface a grappling hook was placed under it and it was raised to the deck of a tug. Some of these bodies were twisted and burned almost beyond recognition. When several bodies were removed another tug, from which the divers were not working, would pull alongside and the dead transferred.

How many dead lie in that charred and sunken hull cannot even be estimated until every nook and corner of the shell has been gone over by the divers.

Bodies of Two Little Girls.

This noon two divers came to the surface. In the arms of one were two little girls, clasped in each others arms. Their hair was of the same color and their dresses were alike, indicating that they were sisters.

The other diver had in his arms the body of a young woman, which had been found with those of the little girls. In her hand was still clasped the dress of one of the children, and the divers thought that she was their mother, and had gone to death with them.

DEFECTS IN THE SLOCUM.

According to statements of excursionists aboard the General Slocum, the following defects were found to exist:

- The davits could not be swung in order to lower the lifeboats. There was no water to extinguish the blaze when it started.
- Life preservers were unfit for use.
- Fire fighting apparatus out of order.
- Quantities of paints, varnish and oils, etc., were stored in the bow of the boat near where the fire originated.

SALVATIONISTS SAIL FOR ENGLISH HOME

Six buglers played "Home, Sweet Home" on the deck of the White Star liner Cymric when she left the Hoboken Tunnel docks to-day for Queenstown and Liverpool, and soon chimed the eyes of Mrs. Richard Evans, widow of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Evans, of the Salvation Army, and her children and grandchildren as they stood beside her and watched the big ship's bow swing towards the mother land. All the family group are soldiers in the Salvation Army. It included her son, Colonel William Evans, commander in New England; his wife and their two daughters, Mrs. Major Samuel Wilkes and Miss Eva Evans. They are bound for London to attend the Salvation Army international congress. Major Wilkes was also in the party. Lieutenant-Colonel Evans died in this city on Saturday last.

FIREMEN ARE DENIED ONE DAY IN FIVE

Mayor Collins Refuses to Sign Bill Allowing Them Time Off—Pleads Expense.

NEEDS FOR 70 MORE MEN

Boston firemen cannot have their one day off in five. Mayor Patrick A. Collins returns to-day without his approval the City Council order for this privilege on account of the expense. His refusal to sign the order ends the matter.

Mayor Collins says in his message to the City Council: "To house 648 men on duty, giving the whole force one day off duty in every five, will require seventy additional men. To pay seventy more firemen, at the present rate of compensation, will call for $56,700 the first year, $60,500 the second, $473,500 the third, $80,500 the fourth and $84,000 the fifth year. These are not, as you must be aware, any such sums, or indeed any money at all, available now, or likely to become available in near future, to provide for any such increase."

According to the statutes such an ordinance as this must be "passed by both branches of the City Council and signed by the Mayor." This prevents passage of the order over the Mayor's veto.

CAPTAINS SAY SHIPS OF BOSTON ARE SAFE

Skippers of steamships plying to Boston Harbor, or between this city and northern and southern ports from Portland, Me., to the West Indies, first heard of the East River horror when their vessels were boarded by BOSTON AMERICAN reporters. All were stunned by the story of the calamity. From statements made by steamer captains, it appears to be the belief in marine circles that Boston officials are more careful and strict in supervision than those in New York, where it is said that the practice of regularly holding fire drills on excursion boats is not generally in vogue.

Boston steamboat men were appalled at the horror of the catastrophe, being perhaps able to more thoroughly realize the scene than landsmen would.

Boston's Regulations.

The regulations governing excursion steamers running out of this port is that no less than five streams of water must be available on every three-second steamer, on ocean-going craft as many as four and five streams of water can be played on any one spot on the boat at one time. Inspectors examine the life preservers on all craft from time to time, and they are kept in first-class condition.

AMERICAN'S EXPERT DIVER IS SICKENED BY AWFUL SCENES IN HULL OF SUNKEN SLOCUM

Man Who Examined Sunken Maine Views Indescribable Horrors While Trying to Extricate Bodies.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The diver who, for the United States Government, explored the wreck of the Maine in Havana Harbor, and yesterday, for the AMERICAN, did likewise with the General Slocum, says: "Divers, like sailors, are reputed to be hard, unsympathetic men, used to scenes that would jangle the nerves of the conventional citizen, but I wish to say, without the slightest feeling of having displayed unprofessional weakness, that when I descended into the wrecked hold of the General Slocum for the AMERICAN, I felt a shaking of the nerves. I would not care to make many such trips."

"After the AMERICAN had notified me of its requirements, I, with assistants, got inside the 175-pound armor. The Slocum lay listed at an angle of about forty-five degrees to port. Her low side was in twenty-five feet of water, her stern in about sixty. Although the parts above water sweltered from the slowly dying heat, there was little smoke to impede my work.

Steamer Disemboweled.

"Part of the main deck was just smash, and I clambered onto it. If I had not known what caused the frightful wreck I would have thought an explosion of some character had ripped the very bowels from the vessel and torn and lacerated her superstructure. The wreck was complete, absolute, and there is no use in trying to restore the hulk to any semblance of a vessel.

"After surveying the surface I went down into the tomb. I noticed that the timbers had been hurled, evidently with a fearful crash through the side of the vessel.

Bodies Float Away.

On a beam lay the pitiful little frame of a child, whose dress was held by the clothes of the thing underneath—the mother evidently. I tried to extricate the forms of those for whom mothers or brothers or sisters were waiting in hospitals or homes. A couple of bodies floated free into dark corners.

"Some of those wailing mothers and sisters and brothers will probably never again see the faces they loved, for the tide is most contrary.

"I crawled gingerly through the gloomy, disembowelled section to amidships. I thought I had my nerves under control, but I had had only a foretaste of the real extent of this horror. There were at least one hundred charred or pitifully distorted bodies of women and children in the centre of the vessel, like those I had just left. I came to the conclusion after making many efforts to extricate the bodies, that nothing but machinery can raise the shapeless mass of metal and wood that lies between the poor victims and human burial.

Tragic Scene.

"A small group impressed itself indelibly upon my memory. There children and a woman, who certainly was their mother, were pinioned against what I took to be a part of the cabin. The children clung to her dress just as if the life was still throbbing in their little hearts, but the mother, with a look of agony on her face, was kept from gripping the little ones by a piece of iron—probably buried aft from the machinery—which lay diagonally across her breast.

"The mangled remains of the General Slocum form as complete a wreck as I have ever seen. They tell me I was down in the tomb about a half hour. That must be a mistake. I was down three a year. It was a great relief when I finally emerged of the armor and looked once more into eyes that glinted with life."

A SAD SCENE ON RIKERS ISLAND.

SOLDIER HAZED WITH CARBOLIC ACID BATH

CONCORD RECRUIT IN CAMP HOSPITAL AFTER PERIOD OF DELIRIUM.

Special to the Boston American.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, June 16.—Hazing, with a bath in carbolic acid, has sent Private D. C. Beach, of Company I, Sixth Regiment, to the camp hospital of the brigade, where, after a period of delirium, he is now suffering the most excruciating agony.

A serious injury to his chest, sustained in playing football a year ago, was also opened anew by the treatment he received at the hands of his comrades.

Beach came to camp as a "nervy" for the first time this year with the Concord regiment and upon being of rugged build it was proposed to give him something extra in the way of an initiation.

Accordingly, he was stripped, and his back liberally bathed in carbolic acid, blistering it so severely that for several minutes he raved like a maniac.

The brigade ambulance took him to the hospital. His condition is not considered dangerous.

WIFE IN TEARS OVER HUSBAND

Special to the Boston American.

LACONIA, N. H., June 16.—Mrs. Howard Parsons, wife of the young trolley conductor who is charged with running away with sixteen-year-old Addie May Tate, was the first person to see him this morning. Parsons was arraigned in the Police Court this morning for examination. He was held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Parsons was in court and watched the proceedings with tense interest. Mrs. Tate was not in court, nor was the daughter who is with her mother, predicted now that she realizes her position.

Immediately after the arraignment Mrs. Parsons sought her husband. She threw herself in his arms and wept bitterly in the office of City Marshal Scott. Parsons seemed overcome, and tried to comfort his wife. Mrs. Parsons started out to secure bail for her husband.

PARSON WATER COMMISSIONER.

GLOUCESTER, June 16.—The appointment of Melvin Parsons as water commissioner has been confirmed by the City Council, to succeed David O. Frost.

GIRL'S NERVE ROUTS THIEF

Miss Gertrude French, pretty eighteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Margaret French, had an exciting experience with a burglar at her home, No. 81 Johnson street, Lynn, in the dark hours of this morning, and by her courage sent him fleeing from the house.

Miss French was suddenly awakened by the feeling that there was someone in the room, and found a man standing beside her bed. She screamed and the intruder ran through Mrs. French's room, leaped from the window to a piazza roof and thence to the ground. Miss French's screams brought Patrolman Allen to the house too late to get trace of the burglar.

Miss French's plucky attack came so soon that the burglar had no time to steal. Nothing in the house was disturbed.

EXPERTS TO BATTLE OVER TUCKER'S FATE

many of the most prominent residents of New England have been received by the lawyers declaring the belief that the prisoner is insane, and that the defendants have not yet found the guilty person. Some of these letters contain offers of assistance in defraying the expenses of Tucker's defence. The letters show more interest in this case than in any murder trial for years.

Long before the time set for the arraignment of Tucker the streets about the jail in East Cambridge and the corridors of the courthouse were crowded with curious persons.

Tucker was up early and ate a good breakfast. He dressed with special care, giving much attention to the combing and brushing of his hair and the manicuring of his finger nails. He wore a double-breasted suit of a dark gray mixture, turned-down collar, black bow tie, blue and white striped shirt, and carried a black soft hat in his hand. His shoes were well polished and he was clean shaven.

"How are you feeling this morning?" asked Sheriff Fairbairn.

"The best in the world—is the sun shining?" was Tucker's reply.

Just then the sun emerged from a cloud, flooding the corridor of the prison with light. Both Tucker and the Sheriff smiled.

"That means good luck for you," suggested the Sheriff.

"That's right, replied Tucker.

Tucker had a brief chat with Lawyer Vahey and spoke a cheery word to Mrs. Tucker. He seemed somewhat restless and asked frequently the time, apparently anxious to get into court.

Asks About Slocum Horror.

An indication of how news of the outside world will reach even a death cell was shown when Tucker suddenly turned to one of the deputy sheriffs and asked:

"What are the facts about the steamboat disaster in New York?"

The deputy told him what the latest reports were. Tucker looked very grave.

"That's too bad," replied Tucker. "I wish I could see a newspaper."

Tucker Appears Smiling.

At 9.25 Deputy Sheriffs John E. Fairbairn and Charles A. Eveleth entered the jail for the prisoner. Eveleth produced a handcuff.

"I'll have to use this," he said, smiling, to Tucker.

"All right," replied the young man.

The handcuff was then slipped around the left wrist of Tucker and attached to the right wrist of Eveleth. Deputy Fairbairn walked on the other side and the trio started for the courtroom.

They emerged from the front door of the prison, Tucker had a smile on his face. Half a dozen women in the crowd gathered to get a glimpse of him, pressed forward, but Tucker looked straight ahead and did not seem to realize that he was either in the street or being stared at by a crowd.

The Indictment Read.

The deputies and their prisoner hurried across the street and darted into a side entrance of the courthouse on Third street. Tucker was then taken up a winding stairway to the second floor and through a year door into the Judge's room, thence into the courtroom, where the handcuff was removed. There were three men in the grilled-iron prison pen, and Tucker was given a seat outside. Except for a slight flush Tucker seemed perfectly cool.

Judge Lawton went on the bench and the clerk convened court. The three men in the prison pen were taken out, and Tucker went inside and sat down. He faced the judge and looked straight at his face.

"Charles L. Tucker, stand up and raise your right hand," said the clerk.

Tucker arose and obeyed, facing the clerk, who began to read the indictment. The courtroom was breathlessly still. Tucker listened intently, but made no move except once or twice to shift his feet and once to moisten his lips with his tongue.

"Not Guilty," He Answers.

The indictment charged that Tucker "feloniously, wilfully and of malice aforethought did kill and murder Mabel Page." At the conclusion of the reading the clerk read:

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," replied Tucker in a firm, even voice. There was no hesitation or quavering. His tones were not low nor apparently above his customary volume.

By this time Tucker had rested his hands on the top of the iron inclosure. His fingers caught firmly about the grilled work, but did not tremble.

Brother Only Kin Present.

Near the pen stood James H. Vahey, of Tucker's counsel. In another part of the room was his brother, Walter. There was no other member of the Tucker family present.

"Tucker," said Judge Lawton, "have you counsel?"

"Yes, sir," replied Tucker.

"You have?" asked the Judge in surprise.

"Yes, sir," repeated Tucker, not understanding the import of the Judge's question.

"But not for the forthcoming trial?" asked the judge.

"No, sir," responded Tucker, "and would like to have the same counsel, Mr. Vahey and Mr. Jones."

"Have you means to employ counsel?"

"Yes, sir," replied Tucker, with a little hesitation.

"What I mean is, have you ample means to conduct a proper defence or only partly enough?"

Tucker hesitated, and the judge repeated his question.

Asks For Same Counsel.

"No, sir, I have not the means," said Tucker in a low and confidential tone.

"Then you want counsel assigned?"

"Yes, sir, and I should like to have the same counsel that I have now."

"Well," said the Judge, "I shall consider the matter and will continue it to a later date."

One of the court officers then signalled to Tucker and he sat down. Lawyer Vahey walked over to the edge of the pen and the two deputy sheriff's opened the gate and Tucker walked out. Vahey and Tucker chatted a few minutes and then Sheriff Fairbairn approached.

"Come along Tucker," said the Sheriff, taking hold of his arm. They left the court room together, and returned to the prison, Tucker not being handcuffed this time.

Tucker Wants Early Trial.

When Tucker reached the street on his return he had a sort of ovation. Quite a little stepped jauntily along at the sheriff's side, chatting to him. He paid absolutely no attention to the crowd, and not a word was said that could be heard by any of the onlookers.

When he reached the jail Tucker was joined by Lawyer Vahey and they had a long conference. The date of the trial which Judge Lawton also took under consideration, was discussed. Lawyer Vahey and Tucker want a trial as soon as possible and the date will probably be set as early in September as the Judge can be prevailed upon to name.

District Attorney Sanderson, who represented the State, refused to say anything except:

"Tucker has been indicted and he has pleaded not guilty—the next thing is the trial."

PLEASANT PROVINCETOWN TEMPTS HOLIDAY MAKERS

Quaint and curious in its historical associations is Provincetown, one of the most delightful points for rest and recreation out of this harbor. This delightful destination may be reached direct by way of the steamer Cape Cod, which leaves Bay State Wharf, foot of Atlantic avenue, daily at 9 o'clock and at 9.30 on Sundays. Such a trip affords a delightful panorama of the shipping of the harbor, and the fortifications and other coast sights down to the tip of the Cape.

PREPARING FOR HOLIDAY EXCURSIONS ON WATER

Active preparations are being made by the owners of pleasure craft in the harbor to accommodate the crowds which are expected to take a day's outing there next week. The large steamer Pleasure Bay, which runs between Rowe's Arch Wharf at the foot of Oliver street and Nantasket Point, has been completely renovated, and presents a freshness which will meet with the appreciation of those to whom the vessel on previous years has been a source of both delight and comfort.

The Pleasure Bay will make the regular trips during the season, and the popularity of Nantasket Point as a pleasure resort will undoubtedly keep the Pleasure Bay busy all Summer.

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA Recommends Pe-ru-na For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia — Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was Senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine because a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Pauline Feutz Five Times Dashes Into the River, Returning With a Human Burden Each Time.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Pauline Feutz, a comely 18-year-old nurse employed in the North Brother Island Hospital, flung herself into the water, swam into the midst of the struggling women and children, brought five little ones safely to shore, and then battled until overmastered by a powerful woman, who dragged her to the bottom, and from whose death clutch she escaped exhausted and helpless. She was pulled ashore by nurses and carried to the hospital.

Miss Feutz was among the first to reach the beach. With the other nurses and men she waded into the water and help ashore all within reach.

Fifty feet away the surface of the water was dotted with the heads of struggling women and children. Some were making feeble efforts to float, others drifted helplessly, kept up by their clothing.

Could Not Hold Her Back.

"I am going out to them," cried Miss Feutz, hysterically, as she pulled off her shoes and skirts.

Several nurses tried to restrain her.

"Let me go," she cried. "I can swim. I must go to their rescue."

She flung the nurses off and jumped into the water. With quick, strong strokes, she soon reached a little girl. Taking the child's golden hair in her teeth she turned and swam to shore, delivering her charge to the nurses who waded out to meet her.

Then she turned back. She grasped another child and took the little one to shore. Notwithstanding the pleading of the nurses she returned again and rescued another child. Five times she reached the shore with her human burdens.

Herself Nearly Drowned.

The sixth trip almost proved her last. As she passed close by a woman who gave no sign of life, the latter's arm suddenly clasped around the girl's neck. Those on the shore saw a short struggle and then both disappeared. They arose again, but Miss Feutz could not break the woman's hold. Finally, she placed her hand under the woman's chin and pushed her off. Before the woman could recover her hold Miss Feutz had passed around and caught her hair, and started to push her toward the shore.

When they were within a few feet of solid footing, the woman suddenly turned and grasped the girl again, both sinking. Soon the girl's body appeared. Her strength had been exhausted. She was dragged ashore more dead than alive, and sent to the hospital.

"It wasn't anything to do," said Miss Feutz later. I saw the women and children struggling, and what could I do but go to their rescue?"

Twenty-four other nurses from North Brother Island, under the leadership of Mrs. K. L. White, the matron, did heroic work. They all rushed into the water, some up to their necks, and each rescued several. Mary McCann, seventeen years, who arrived recently from Ireland, walked into the water four times and rescued a person each trip. She was a patient in the hospital, and after her recovery was employed as a helper.

Ladders in the hands of Matron White and Miss Kate O'Donnell, assistant matron, were thrust within reach of six persons, who clung to them and were drawn to safety.

A MONTH-OLD SURVIVOR OF THE HORROR.

(Copyright, 1904, by Amer ican-Journal-Examiner.)

Here is a photograph of a nurse in the hospital on North Brothers Island, who has in her arms a child found floating on the water. It was about a month old and alive. Its parents are probably dead, as are its sisters or brothers, if it had any.

Saw Women Kiss and Jump Into the Flames

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., June 16.—The new boat of the Norwalk Steamboat Company, Martha's Vineyard, which made her initial trip to New York yesterday, was the nearest steamboat to the General Slocum when she was beached at North Brothers Island. On the Vineyard were about 200 passengers, invited guests of the company for the first trip. Women fainted at the sight, and many were made sick. Nearly all took the first train for home when they arrived at New York, having no heart to return as they came.

"I'll never go on another steamboat," declared Mrs. Harry S. McBride, when she arrived in South Norwalk. "It was simply awful to see those women and children shrieking and praying as they were slowly roasted to death. They jumped into the water so fast that the first were all pushed down into the water and drowned. The sight will remain with me always, and I am so nervous yet that I will not be able to sleep for I don't know how long."

Took Dying Kiss.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Cannon Newkirk, of Norwalk, were also passengers. Mrs. Newkirk was made ill by her experience.

"I hope I never live to see anything like it again, and we were so near and yet we could not help them. I saw two women kiss each other and then jump right into the flames."

Misses Anna and Alice Cole said that the hair of one woman was on fire while she was in the water. We could not close our eyes all last night. The awful scene and the shrieks of the burning hundreds rang in our ears. When I saw those people burning or drowning by hundreds, I fainted, and did not know any more about it until we reached New York. I am glad I saw no more."

"Providence was kind to me, if not to them." This spoke Mrs. R. J. Osborn, Ex-Mayor Samuel H. Richards, of Syracuse, was a passenger on the Vineyard.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A flag at half mast was flying over Public School 45 today. The building is between First and Second avenues, in East Fifth Street. It was to this school that most of the child victims belonged.

The excursion had been the talk of the children for a week or more, and every pupil that could go, whether he or she belonged to the Sunday School, managed to get off from studies yesterday and start on the ill-fated General Slocum.

The school became the rendezvous for the neighborhood children early to-day, and as early as 7.30 they had gathered in crowds in front of it. By eight the street became almost impassable from the little ones. There was not a child in the crowd that was not crying; not one that had not lost a dear friend, while many had lost relatives, sisters or brothers.

Probably 100 children from this school will not respond to the roll to-morrow morning.

FEAR TROUBLE AT ST. MARK'S CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 16.—Police Commissioner McAdoo to-day gave orders to have a large force of policemen stationed near and at the St. Mark's Parish church to preserve order in the event of a demonstration, which he has reason to believe will develop during the day.

Four men were accordingly sent to the neighborhood of the church early, and will remain on duty all day. Seven policemen had been stationed at the church since yesterday when the first news of the disaster was received. Pastor Haas's house is also guarded.

Crew Cowards, He Says; Fire Hose Was Rotten

NEW YORK, June 16.—Scathing arraignment of the alleged lack of discipline of the crew of the General Slocum, bad condition of the emergency fire hose and of the life preservers was made by John Holthusen, the venerable sexton of St. Mark's Church. He was a passenger, and saved not only himself, but his two daughters. He said:

"The crew tore down duck fire hose from brackets and from reels, and they acted without any sense of discipline or self-control. It was only too plain that they had never had a fire drill of any kind. The hose seemed to be of the poorest quality, and the men were unable to make any connections because the thread of the metal coupling was worn, and the water poured out at the joint, and no stream could be directed against the fire. The crew threw down the hose and ran excitedly about the vessel.

"There were few passengers who were able to obtain life-preservers, for those were secured so firmly overhead by wires, which passed through staples and were drawn taut, that they could not be drawn out. These wires were so strong that it was impossible for frenzied men and women to break them. I was unable to get any, though I am a strong man and struggled with all my might. In some cases passengers got hold of cork belts, and found them in such bad condition that they could not tie the cords about their waists.

"I have lived many years in this world, but never have I seen such a scene of horror. The trampling of the people, their cries of terror, that awful rush over the stern of the boat, men, women and children all together, I shall never forget."

Says the Passengers Started the Flames

NEW YORK, June 16.—F. A. Barnaby, president of the Knickerbocker Steamboat Company, owners of the General Slocum, declares that if the fire or loss of life were due in any part to defective apparatus, the fault lies not with the steamboat company, but with the government inspectors, to whom the boat was delivered three weeks ago. Their report on what was needed to make the vessel safe and seaworthy was fulfilled to the letter, he says, and the company exceeded the requirements.

The supply of life preservers, Mr. Barnaby said, exceeded by 250 the number demanded, namely, 2,500. The crew had been thoroughly drilled to fight fire.

"Panic evidently caused the awful loss of life," said Mr. Barnaby, "and against panic there are no preservers, especially in a crowd of women and children. We had provided against even that. Officers of the boat constantly patrolled every deck, and there were two members of the police force on board. The crew was perfectly drilled in fire fighting, and the fire apparatus was in perfect shape and adequate.

"What started the fire I do not know. We have four men investigating it. There was nothing on the boat to burn except its woodwork.

"The Spring Dock (General Slocum was overhauled from her keel to her flagstaff. When we finished the improvements on the General Slocum had cost this company $30,000.

"The General Slocum carried about 1,000 passengers, mostly women and children. As the boat is licensed to carry 2,500 persons, she was in no way crowded.

"Members of the crew who have visited my office agree that the fire originated on the deck among a mass of beach grass which was brought aboard by the excursionists and on which a quantity of bananas were lying. When the passengers saw the flames they fled panic-stricken to the upper deck and greatly interfered with the efforts of the crew to attack the fire."

Handsome Yacht Left Slocum to Its Doom

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Somewhere up the Sound to-day there is a millionaire yacht owner with a heavy burden on his conscience. A cry of hope rang upon the air from the frenzied hundreds on the burning General Slocum when they saw steaming past the doomed vessel a long black hulled yacht bearing the pennant of the New York Yacht Club. Her graceful lines and dainty appearance contrasted cruelly with the burned and blackened hull that was racing past her, and of all the boats that followed, this yacht alone could have followed beside the Slocum to take from her decks the crowds of endangered women and suffering little ones.

Her appearance at the time was the only cry of hope that shone to those on board the burned steamer. Women held their children across the railing in their arms and called piteously that they be saved. Tiny little ones held out their arms pleadingly to the smartly dressed men and gracefully gowned women upon the deck of the trim yacht. The wheel of the yacht was sent whirling over. Her trim nose quivered a moment and then—turned quickly away from the burning boat and, making a wide detour, passed and left the crowded Slocum to her fate.

A wild cry went up as the yacht turned and deserted the flame-swept steamer—a cry that will ring through the ears of the lucky men and women then on board her through all eternity.

FIRE PROBABLY DUE TO GREASY RUBBISH

NEW YORK, June 16.—No definite information could be obtained about the origin of the fire. According to the officers of the General Slocum, smoke poured out of a storage room on the starboard side forward, and almost immediately that entire section was in flames. The storeroom was packed with inflammable material, oil, paint, old ropes, camp stools and lumber.

Nothing was left to give any clue of the origin, as every vestige of the storage room was consumed. While the officers and employes agreed that the storage room was set on fire, many passengers who were saved felt certain that the flames had originated in the kitchen, where the managers of the excursion were preparing a luncheon for them.

One of the men declared that he had served with a volunteer bucket brigade, passing water to the kitchen until he was driven back by the heat, and that the flames spread from the kitchen to the storage room.

Another theory is that the fire started in the main deck near the forecastle, where it is said a bedclerk left some clothes near a receptacle containing oil and benzine and that this took fire.

Coroner Joseph I. Berry, after a long investigation, dictated this statement:

"In my opinion the fire started in the storage room on the starboard side forward. First smoke issued from there, and then, according to witnesses, a fire alarm was sounded. The management may be cleared of responsibility if it appears that the fire was the result of spontaneous combustion."

CHARLESTOWN ARRAYED IN BUNTING FOR GREAT BUNKER HILL CELEBRATION

JUBILEE BEGINS TO-NIGHT WITH "OPEN HOUSE," CLOSING TO-MORROW.

Residents of Charlestown will awake to-morrow morning to find their famous district arrayed in a gorgeous gown of red, white and blue, entirely in keeping with the glories of her great career. In the afternoon they will form a mighty host and march proudly through her realms in celebration of the battle of 1775, which gave renown to her name throughout the civilized world.

The preparation for all this will begin this evening. No one pects to sleep to-night within a mile City square. Already the small boy has found himself unable to restrain his pent-up enthusiasm. He has been sprinkling the car tracks with blank cartridges and treating the passengers to surprises.

The Seventeenth of June comes but once a year, and Charlestown will try to make enough noise to last a reelborough. Horns, blank cartridges and whatever will make noise will probably be used, police or no police, as in former years.

Keep Open House.

Those who do not wish to celebrate in noise will entertain friends. Most of the military and social organizations in the district will keep "open house."

The principal event of this evening will be the annual banquet of the Catholic Literary Union in the main hall of the Charlestown Artillery Armory, on Bunker Hill street. James J. Phelan will be the toastmaster. Speakers who have accepted invitations are Governor Bates, Congressman John A. Sullivan, Senator Charles S. Sullivan, Arthur W. Dolan, president of the Common Council; the Revs. M. J. Twomey, James N. Supple, Joseph J. Murphy and Augustus J. Bailey. Tomorrow "open house" will be kept at the clubhouse of the union in Monument square.

Electrical Parade.

For the first time in many years there will be no morning parade. In fact, it will be omitted for the first time since "Old Put" and the Continentals first started the custom. But there will be an electrical parade in the evening, and it is hoped that this will compensate in beauty for the noisy parade.

This parade is expected to be the feature of the day. The Charlestown Carnival Association, which abandoned the usual morning parade because of "lack of funds," has been able to arrange for one of the finest spectacles ever seen by the city. The illuminated floats will be run on the car tracks, and more than 10,000 multicolored lights will be used in the illumination. The brilliant pictures will roll practically through all the streets of Charlestown that have car tracks.

Decorated Autos.

There will be eighteen decorated automobiles accompanying the parade. One will precede each float, and will carry a banner bearing the title of the float and the name of the organization represented thereby. This will be a novel departure from the custom of placing a Nubian banner bearer.

There will be about 110 figures in the tableaux. All the young men and women will be selected from the Sunday schools and particular organizations of Charlestown.

In the groups will be Uncle Sam, the Goddess of Liberty, Columbia, the different States of the Union, the countries of South America, Mexico, the Japanese, Russians, Indians, Western cowboys, Troopers, Southern darkies, Esquimaux, United States soldiers and sailors, Hawaiians, Filipinos, Porto Ricans and living representations of flowers of all kinds. A bewildering array of color, as beautiful as a chicable pageant, will be the result.

Historical Tableaux.

The floats of tableaux cars will represent subjects embracing epochs from 1777 to 1904. Beginning with 1777, the year that Congress adopted the stars and stripes, the float of that date typifies "The Birth of the Flag"; the year 1803, "The Louisiana Purchase," represented by a float entitled "A Good Bargain"; 1804, "The Last of Piracy"; 1810, "The Ocean Conquered by Steam"; 1820, "The Land of Flowers," ceding of Florida to the United States; 1822, "Triumph of Statesmanship," the Monroe doctrine; 1844, "Triumph of Electricity," invention of the telegraph by Samuel Finley Breese Morse, of Charlestown; 1845, "The Lone Star," acquisition of Texas; 1849, "Eldorado," discovery of gold in California; 1854, "Triumph of Diplomacy," Commodore Perry's treaty with Japan; 1865, "The Reunion," the North and South once more united; 1867, "The Midnight Sun," the acquisition of Alaska; 1869, "Triumph of Engineering," the continent spanned by the steam railroad; 1879, "Triumph of Finance," resumption of specie payments; 1893, "Pearl of the Pacific," American protectorate over Hawaii; 1899, "Our New Possessions," acquisition of Porto Rico and the Philippines.

Queen of the Carnival.

Conspicuous among the costumed figures will be Miss Amelia T. Dill, who is to be queen of the carnival. She will represent the Goddess of Liberty on a gorgeously decorated float of great size. In a constellation of thirteen States she will be like a beautiful jewel surrounded by a halo of smaller, yet brilliant stars. This float will represent the "Birth of the Flag" in 1777.

"Ocean Conquered," the year 1819, will be another of the splendid spectacles. Columbia will be represented by Miss Lillian M. Dillon.

Charles H. Dow is to be Neptune. This float represents the victory over the waters in allegorical significance of the crossing of the ocean by the first steam vessel. Columbia had that proud honor, and gracefully she sits upon a throne of high coral formation, holding in her hands the reins of complete mastership over old Neptune.

New Possessions.

The closing tableau will represent "Our New Possessions," and will be dated 1899. America's glory is the dominating theme, and the magnificent colors of the stars and stripe encompass a chariot of delicate blue and gold.

The civic and military parade will start at 2 p. m., and will form at the corner of Bunker Hill and Sackville streets. It will be in two divisions, commanded by Major Thomas E. Spalb and Maurice J. Power, Lawrence H. Sullivan will be chief marshal.

The following organizations are expected to appear in line: Marines and sailors from the Navy Yard, artillery from the harbor forts, Charlestown city guard, Charlestown artillery, Bagley and Regan camps, U. S. W. V., Abraham Lincoln camp, divisions 1, 3, 26, 37 and 43, John Boyle O'Reilly Association, Sarsfield Guards, Knights of Zion, Knights of Sherwood Forest, Unity Guards, Charlestown High School Cadets, First Battalion of Boys' Brigade.

Electrical Parade.

Start at 8 o'clock p. m. from Bunker Hill street, corner Sackville street.

Route—Bunker Hill street to Chelsea street, to City square, to Warren bridge, to Causeway, to Main, Charlestown bridge, City square, Main street, Sullivan square, under Sullivan square terminal, Main street, Bunker Hill street, Sackville street, then dismissed.

This parade will embrace epochs from 1777 to 1904, humors displayed by automobiles, over 10,000 colored lights, floats representing history-making events, countless bonfires, forest and flowers; about 110 figurants.

Parade Route.

Route of military and civic parade, which will start at 2 p. m.: Bunker Hill street, Chelsea, Prospect, Cross, City square, North Side, Park street, Warren, Winthrop, Monument square, East and North Side, Bartlett street, Elm, High, Monument square, South Side, Monument avenue, Warren street, Thompson square, Main street, City square, West Side, Sixth Oxford avenue, Cambridge street, Seaver, Gardner, Main, Baldwin, Bunker Hill, Green, High, Monument square, southeast corner, where will be the review and dismissal.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR WARREN DEDICATION

Plans for the dedication of the General Joseph Warren statue in Roxbury to-morrow have been made by the committees in charge with the purpose of reliping in interest anything that Charlestown may have to offer. The exercises and parade will take place around noon, so that those who would otherwise miss the usual morning parade in Charlestown may journey to Roxbury and witness ceremonies full of historic interest.

Citizens of Roxbury are looking forward with keen anticipation to the event, for it is their first local celebration in twenty years. The day is not the Seventeenth of June for them, but Joseph Warren day.

The official dedication services will be held at 11 o'clock and will be followed by the parade of Roxbury military and civic societies. The column will be reviewed at the statue by Mayor Collins and the guests of the city of Boston. The general committee, of which Solomon A. Bolster is president, desires to signalize the event by a celebration befitting the subject and worthy the spirit of Old Roxbury. It is believed the occasion will bring out a reunion of many of the old time citizens.

Route of the Parade.

The parade will form on Winthrop and Moreland streets, all organizations to report at the junction of Greenville and Winthrop streets at 10:45 a. m.

The column will start immediately after the official city exercises, about 12 noon, and march over the following route: Kearsarge avenue, Warren street, Waumbeck street, Humboldt avenue, Walnut avenue, Dale street, Oakland, Thornton, Ellis, Hawthorne, Highland, Fort avenue, Cedar street, Highland, Eliot square to junction of Dudley and Bartlett streets, and there will be dismissed about 2 p. m.

Banquet at 3 P. M.

At 3 there will be a banquet in Symposia Hall, Masonic Temple, on Warren street. The dedication exercises will be of a simple and appropriate nature, including an address by Henry W. Putnam, which will follow the unveiling of the statue, the delivery to the city, and the acceptance by Mayor Collins. At the banquet Governor Bates will reply for the Commonwealth and Mayor Collins for the city.

The reply for the nation has been assigned to Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, who was born in Roxbury. In recognition of General Warren's prominence in Masonry is colonial days, Hon. C. T. Gallagher has been asked to respond for the Masonic fraternity. Secretary Olin will act as toastmaster. W. W. Davis is chairman of the Dinner committee.

Speeches in Old Church.

The final event of the day will occur at 7 p. m., when the literary and musical exercises will be held in the First Church in Eliot Square. Rev. James de Normandie, the pastor, will preside. Rev. E. E. Hale, D. D., will make a prayer and also deliver an address. The oration will be Rev. Edward Anderson, a Roxbury schoolboy, who was subsequently colonel of an Indiana Cavalry Regiment in the Civil War. The Apollo Grand Army chorus, of Thirty-two voices, will be sung by a chorus of fifty school children. The services will be open to the public, no tickets being required.

Roxbury has been especially anxious to honor Warren's memory, as he was not only born there, but spent most of his life in that town. His home in 1775 was in Boston, on the site of the American House on Hanover street. He died in Charlestown, and was first buried in the old Granary Ground, but the remains now rest in Forest Hills Cemetery.

President Not Coming.

In reply to an invitation extended by W. W. Parks, the Roxbury historian, asking President Roosevelt to attend the dedication exercises at the Warren statue to-morrow, the following letter has come:

June 4, 1904.

My Dear Sir—Your letter of the 2d inst. has been received, and in reply I regret to say that the President's engagements somewhat similar to your own coming to the President is so great he finds it impossible to attempt a compliance with them. With assurances that it would afford the President pleasure to meet your wishes if it were at all feasible to do so, believe me,

Very truly yours,

B. F. BARNES,
Acting Secretary to the President.

COUNSEL WAIVES WOMAN'S ARREST

UHRIG DIVORCE CASE NEARLY CAUSED IMPRISONMENT OF PHYSICIAN'S WIFE.

MRS. JOSEP H UHRIG.

The threatened arrest of Mrs. Frank E. Draper, wife of the correspondent in the love famous Uhrig divorce case, which was averted only by the generosity of the attorney for Joseph Uhrig, was one of several sensational features which marked the opening of the second trial of the case, which began this morning before Judge Sheldon in the Superior Court.

The testimony of Harry H. Blanchard that he had delivered the summons and witness fees to Mrs. Draper, and had distinctly heard Mrs. Draper's voice in the next room when the maid took the papers to her, was accepted by the court as evidence of service, notwithstanding the sworn statement of Mr. Draper that to the best of his knowledge his wife was at the time absent from the house.

Thereupon Mrs. Draper's default in refusing to obey the order of the court was recorded, and Judge Sheldon informed Dr. Draper that unless counsel for Joseph Uhrig who is suing for separation from Margaret L. Uhrig, would accept the doctor's promise to produce his wife when wanted, he should issue a capias for her arrest. The promise was accordingly made and accepted by Mr. McClennen, counsel for the libellant.

THE CHAPERON ON SOCIETY

ALLBRIGHT MADE NO COMPLAINT OF HIS OWN RICH

By the Chaperon.

THOSE of us who went down to Cohasset to attend the wedding of Miss Edith Luce to Stephen Pearson Browne were well repaid, for I have not seen such a pretty little ceremony for some time. It was in the old First Parish Church, the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham officiating. It was a wedding of surprises, and surprises that were all pleasing.

One of these features was the music. This was furnished by an orchestra composed of the personal friends of the bride.

The bride, who is a striking brunette, was charming in a gown of white satin trimmed with the rarest of old lace. She wore a tulle veil which was held up with pearls and she carried a shower bouquet of the same flowers. Another surprise that awaited us was that there were no bridesmaids, maid of honor or best man, but there was the usual number of ushers. They were Matthew Luce, the bride's brother; Dr. C. J. White, Richard Welch, Jr., G. O. Schneller, Sidney M. Williams and E. Lincoln Bryant.

Boston members of the Summer colony at Newport, and especially those that are musical, will be glad to learn that Mrs. Leary, of New York, will not forsake Newport for the entire season. It is heard that she would not come on at all this Summer, but later rumor has it that she will arrive later in the season and will open her house for a few weeks.

Miss Leary's musicales are a feature of the season there. She has the art of bringing together people who are musical in the extreme and entertaining them, and then to make them pay for their entertainment she has them perform for her guests.

Mrs. Ogden Goelet is in Newport for the Summer. She had delivered her arrival until after the Goelet-Whelen nuptials.

I am very sorry to hear that the brilliant ceremony that was to make Miss Julia de Parrea Watts and Franz Hoge Krebs man and wife, had to be abandoned at the last minute. The nuptials promised to be one of the most brilliant of the season in New York, but as the bride is only convalescent from a severe serious illness the services planned for the church had to be given up at the last minute and were at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George E. Watts, No. 851 Lexington avenue, instead.

The bride looked very pretty, although she showed painful traces of her recent illness and was much paler than usual. She was dressed simply but prettily, as became the occasion, and she made a very pleasing bride.

The best man was John Walter Hastings, of Boston, and the ushers were Reginald Fairfax Rolfe, of Boston, and George William Kelham, formerly of Cambridge. The bride was unattended, and was given away by her brother, George H. Watts.

There were very few Boston people present, as the house that was chosen for friendship to one or the other. They were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon, Miss Annie Quincy, Walter Hastings and Reginald Fairfax Rolfe.

A few Boston society people left this morning for the other side, where they will spend the Summer season. A farewell tea took them over was the White Star liner, Cymric, and she had aboard Mrs. Robert P. Bartlett and family, Mr. J. Wallace Goodrich and wife, Rev. F. C. Heathcote, Mr. R. B. Merriman, Mr. E. A. Selfridge.

STONE AND BRICK POINTERS.

The officers elected by Stone and Brick Pointers' Assembly, No. 1,620, Knights of Labor, are: A. H. Gillispee, master workman; John H. Ryan, worthy foreman; George O. Clapp, recording secretary; William G. Pickett, financial secretary; James F. Miller, treasurer; T. J. Seaman, almoner; Walter H. Wilkins, statistician; William G. Pickett, M. J. Leyden and G. H. Smith, trustees. The assembly voted to participate in the seating reception to Terrence V. Powderly in this city, and appointed a committee to act on the joint committee of reception.

SCHOOLBOY LABOR

World's Attention Now Focussed on

ATHLETES

WHO WILL COMPETE

TOMORROW

ALL streets and alleys still lead to the Dorchester athletic grounds to-morrow—that is, at least, so far as the Boston public schoolboy athletes and their friends and relatives are concerned. The open meet at the Dorchester grounds promises to be one of the most hotly contested and highly exciting competitions of the season.

While there will be some of the 300 stars from Harvard and other places there, the interest will center in the work of the high school boys, as it will have a great deal to do with the selection of the team which Commissioner William Mansfield Hurd will take to St. Louis to compete in the athletic carnival on July 1, 2 and 3. The high school team will consist of about sixteen boys, and there are already about fifty of the crack schoolboy athletes who have applied for admission to the team.

The BOSTON AMERICAN will be able on Saturday to announce the names of the members who will compose the high school team, as it is expected that the committee will decide upon them Saturday morning. The BOSTON AMERICAN is only anxious that the very best boys in the city in such a contest as that of the World's Fair shall be chosen.

The Grammar school team will be selected as a result of the meet at the Charlesbank Public Playground to be attended by about The boys who make the best records there will be the lucky fellows to go to the Exposition City and augment the strength with the schoolboys of the other cities of the country.

Want Entries To-day.

The Grammar school boys must have their entries in to-day. They should give their names, ages, the events they wish to enter and have the application signed by a principal of the schools which they represent. Here are the names of some who have failed to put in the necessary things in their applications, and who should attend to it to-day: Joseph Cohen, Jr., Frank Henry, James Godfrey, Samuel H. Abbott, Joseph Lyons, Daniel Fitzgerald, Stephen Alovsky and Louis A. Brawley.

The chance of going to the World's Fair and having all expenses paid is an opportunity of a lifetime. In this particular case the trip will prove of the greatest benefit to the boy who will be fortunate enough to be selected. It will prove of benefit to the schools of the entire country and it will prove of great athletic benefit. Thousands of boys will be able to go there at their own or parents' expense and they will be anxious to produce the winners of the games. This may be done by any school boy of New England who can send his application to James E. Sullivan, chief of the athletic committee, St. Louis Fair, St. Louis.

What Boys Must Do.

The schoolboy who wishes to enter the high school events must be under nineteen years of age. He must be a bona fide undergraduate of his principal and must send 50 cents for each event in which he wishes to enter to Mr. Sullivan. Every boy who goes into the games will get a medal of participation and the winners of the events will receive handsome and costly trophies, the first one the gift of Mr. Hearst.

The Boston team which will go to the Fair as the guests of Mr. Hearst will make the trip in a Pullman car that has already been provided. This car will be joined to the train that will take the New York boys, and the Dub athletes will have a chance to size up the Gotham representatives on the way out. The train will start in season to reach St. Louis so that the boys will have a chance to rest up for the games that begin on July 4.

ASKS PRISON CASE HEARING

TO BOSTON AMERICAN

I have no doubt being noticed in the columns of the BOSTON AMERICAN, for several months been trying to secure a hearing for charges of cruelty and abuses that I have made against the administration of the prison system of this State and particularly against the management of the State Prison in Charlestown.

A recent decision of the Supreme Court by the Grand Jury of Suffolk County, this institution has failed temporarily.

Now the position of the matter is this: I am an humble citizen of the Commonwealth, and I charge that the acts of cruelty and abuses of various kinds in our institutions—victims of which, as a general rule I am able to judge and of their effects, I respectfully ask, in the name of State, this Commonwealth that boasts of its culture, of its progress, of its service to humanity, shall give a little attention to its own citizens, and not permit that they are driving men to insanity and perpetrating crimes that it shall permit the head from its own eye before taking the mote from the eyes of my fellow citizens. Let my brothers, whose imagined cruelties shock the moral nature of this State, be set instead of giving so much attention to Philippine barbarities. In the name of God, I turn its eyes so that we all may see how our own citizens, even though criminal, are tortured and oppressed.

In heaven's name, let me get a hearing to determine if such things exist or not in our institutions.

I am willing to satisfy ourselves with the statement that a hearing is not necessary? The evil balance will be struck in favor of arbitrate, and our prison barons say there is nothing to be brought.

All that I want is a hearing, and the fair sense of the community.

While many may think the image of our Maker are abused, tortured and made insane in our institutions, I cannot help imagining a hearing in their defense.

If my charges were so unfounded why did the Governor give orders, after I had presented my case before the Grand Jury, to have the doors of "light solitary cells" kept opened?

CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK.

International Vice-President Hunter of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union, who has been conducting the strike of that organization in this city, is in New York to-day for a conference with the representatives of Roebling & Company in regard to the attitude of the Boston branch of the company toward the agreement the concern has with the International Union. His will return to this city to-morrow.

The firm of Patrick Mettevern & Sons and A. G. Buell & Company have signed the agreement calling for a strictly union shop. All of the men on strike are rapidly securing employment.

25-cent ticket to the Johnstown Flood, Revere Beach, free with next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN. Order from your newsdealer in time.

COPPERSMITHS' STRIKE.

The strike of the coppersmiths employed by the firm of S. H. Hicks & Sons came to an end to-day, when the men returned to work, the firm having agreed to give in to the demands of the union for a strictly union shop in all departments. International Vice-President Quinn, who has been in the city for some days, had charge of the negotiations and affected the settlement.

The strike at the shop of H. G. Badger Sons & Co., where the sheet metal workers are out, is still on. The twenty men employed by the firm have secured employment in other shops, and there remain but fifty-six men out in the city. Five firms, it was announced to-day, have signed the scale.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

BETS MADE FIGHT WON'T BE HELD

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—The San Francisco sporting public is waiting. Everything is at a standstill until it is definitely settled about the housecap of one James J. Jeffries. It will be several days before definite information as to whether or not the fight will take place on June 30 is received.

Meanwhile it is about as easy to get a fight fan to express an opinion as to get a pearl from a clam. As to betting on the contest, there is absolutely nothing doing unless it is even money or better that the fight will not come off. As a matter of fact, the impression is very slowly, but nevertheless surely, gaining upon the minds of the "inner circle" that the scrap will not occur this month, if at all.

The postponement until June 30 has brought disappointment to many. A number of Butte sports arrived in town Sunday and Monday, only to learn that the fight would not take place as scheduled, and as their leave of absence could not possibly be extended they will be compelled to return to Montana without having the pleasure of seeing their idol in action.

Several of the theatrical companies in town whose engagements end this week have among their number followers of the fistic who have been putting their own backs and shaking hands with themselves over the fact that they would be in San Francisco during the fight week. But now—well, their discourses on hard luck would fill this page.

SPRINTERS IN REVERE RACES

National sprinting championships will be inaugurated at the Revere Cycle track on Friday afternoon, when the most famous of the professional sprinters will come to battle for the gold offered in three events by the local track management. This will be the first appearance of the professionals in this city since the early part of last season, and judging by what they have been doing in Vaudeville, they should be able to make an excellent showing here.

In the field of starters will be MacFarland and Lawson, fresh from their successful tour of Australia; George Kramer, the champion of the year; Ed Root, who as an amateur, has won his spurs on the Revere track; George Schreiber, one of the Bedell Brothers, Frank Caldwell, the popular rider from Connecticut; Jacobson, Fogler, Penn, and in fact six of the men who have been making cycling history in the sprinting game. There are to be three events for the professionals, including a mile handicap, ten-mile open and a championship race at a distance to be determined within a day or two by the board of control of the L. A. W.

Jimmy Moran and Hugh MacLean, the two most bitter enemies on the track today, race for twenty miles. This race is to be for the local championship, and will be run off in the pursuit order.

LONG RUN FOR BIKERS.

Many cyclists will take part in the century run of the Century Road Club of America on Sunday. The start will be made from Quincy square on the track to 6 and 8 a. m. The actual time allowed to complete the 100 miles is fourteen consecutive hours.

TWO OF HARVARD'S BASEBALL STARS IN PRACTICE.

Here are the pictures of two of Harvard's best baseball players. They were taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN photographer on Soldiers' Field. The man at the bat is Mathews, the colored shortstop. Quigley is behind the plate.

BOSTON YOUTHS OUT FOR GOODS

That fast four representing the St. Joseph's A. A. of the West End, will certainly make their competitors hustle in the races on the Charles to-morrow, judging by their recent performances.

This year's crew is the fastest that the association has yet turned out, and the followers of rowing in the West End are looking for a record.

Last Thursday, in a trial spin, the boys managed to clip off a few seconds of their best time, and the chances are that the crew this year will be sent by the management to compete in the Harlem regatta in July.

The makeup and the entries for the coming regatta are, Intermediate single, W. Cooney; junior double, T. Gleason and William Donnelly; junior four working boat, P. Reeves bow, T. Gannon 2, T. Keenan 3, and Dick O'Donnell stroke; senior four, H. McGuinness bow, E. Twigg 2, T. Long 3, and W. Dunn stroke.

MEN SELECTED FOR GAMES IN ENGLAND

In all except two events the entries of the Harvard-Yale team which will meet the Oxford-Cambridge athletes have been practically decided upon. Trials in the quarter-mile run and the hammer throw will be held in a few days, and men selected for these events. The other entries will likely be:

100-yard dash—Shick, Harvard; Torrey, Yale.

Half-mile run—Parsons, Yale; Young, Harvard.

Mile run—Oleott, Yale; Hill, Yale.

Two-mile run—King, Harvard; Colwell, Harvard.

120-yard hurdles—Clapp, Yale; Bird, Harvard.

High Jump—Murphy, Harvard; Victor, Yale.

Broad Jump—Ayres, Harvard; Sheffield, Yale.

RIVAL TEAMS IN TWO GAMES

Those two old-time rivals, South Boston and Dorchester, will battle twice to-morrow, morning and afternoon. The forenoon game will start at 10.30 at the Locust-street grounds, while the afternoon contest will take place on Nightingale Field, Dorchester, at 3.30.

For a number of years both teams have been the bitterest rivals. When they clash it is a clash that the game will be a hummer. The series now stand even, and both are anxious to win the deciding game.

The Rev. J. J. Harkins has charge of the South Boston nine, and he promises to have one of the fastest nines that ever graced a diamond.

WEST QUINCY FANS' TREAT

After a long absence, baseball comes back to West Quincy in the good old-fashioned style. To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock the Tremont nine will play the first of a great new suits, will endeavor to show the strong South Quincy team how it ought to be done.

In the afternoon at 3.30 the West Quincy team, which in years past has upheld a reputation as one of the best, will meet the Hyde Parks.

SAYS BARROWS WILL STICK.

DETROIT, June 16.—According to Business Manager Nevin, of the Detroit American League Club, there is not truth in the report that Manager Barrows will be succeeded by George Huff, of the University of Illinois.

CAMBRIDGE IS THE CHAMPION

Cambridge Latin won the preparatory school baseball championship by defeating Newton High in the final game of the league series, by a score of 7 to 2. Both teams were on even terms for the ownership of the pennant and the contest was necessary to split the tie. Cambridge had an easier victory than was anticipated, the secret of her success by in the ability of the boys to bat Newton's pitcher at the right time. A collection of errors on the part of Cambridge showed the poor support given Twitter Nash, who was mowing down the opposing batters and allowed only two hits.

The game was won in the sixth, when Cambridge, on a combination of hits and errors, got three runners across the plate.

SCHOOL TEAM PROTEST GAME

Gloucester High has protested the Salem game in the North Shore Interscholastic series played in Salem Monday. The objections come on questionable eligibility of two Salem athletes.

It is almost certain that the protest will not be allowed and in such a case Dummer Academy will win the championship. Dummer was coached by Monty, the former Notre Dame baseball and football captain.

BIG GAME AT RINDGE PARK.

A good contest is promised to-morrow afternoon, when the Cambridge, Somerville and the Wilson A. C., of Somerville, cross bats at Rindge Park, North Cambridge. The fans have been told to bring numbers to cheer on the home team. Supt. Montgomery will have grounds roped off, and ample police protection to prevent the breaking crowd is looked for. Part of the field will be reserved for women, as the fair sex attend these games in large numbers. Manager Sharp will have Maloney, of Cambridge Latin High on the firing line, and Kelly, of Arlington High on the receiving end.

HEMLOCKS GROWING FAST.

The Hemlocks of the West End have not been defeated this season. They have won the three games they played, defeating by large scores the Orients of East Boston, the Bristols of Chelsea and the Howards of Charlestown. Most of the credit for the Hemlocks' victories has been given to Pete Berry, their crack pitcher, as he has delivered the goods in fine style. The Hemlocks will have a game with the Orients to-morrow at Boston Common, the Avenue of Jamaica Plain, and on Saturday they play the Tammany A. C. of Roxbury.

YOUNG GIRL FINE SHOT.

NEW YORK, June 16.—In the National Schuetzenfest at Union Hill, Miss Amelia Zimmerman, daughter of Gus Zimmerman, the champion rifle shot, made a remarkable score, scoring 121 men and making fifty-seven points out of a possible sixty. Her father was second with fifty-five.

HOLY CROSS' BAD GAME.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., June 16.—In one of the poorest exhibitions of ball playing seen here by a long while Williams drubbed the Holy Cross nine, 17 to 3. The Worcester collegians were way off in their fielding.

JEFF OPERATED UPON, AND IT'S PROBABLE HIS BATTLE WITH MUNROE WILL BE DECLARED OFF

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HARBIN SPRINGS, Cal., June 16.—There is small chance of Jeffries being able to face Munroe in the ring on June 30 in 'Frisco, and he may never be able to fight again.

His knee is in a very serious condition to-day. Outside of that, he is in perfect health.

BIG FELLOW DISCOURAGED.

Both he and Trainer Delaney are plainly discouraged, but neither has given up hope of the champion being able to keep his engagement on June 30.

Jeffries's left knee has been operated upon. He will have to remain in bed for five or six days. At the expiration of that time he may be able to continue training.

Although the operation was a very painful one, the champion bore up very well. He did not take an anaesthetic during the cutting process. Dr. Devenlin, who performed the operation, was greatly surprised at the condition of the champion's knee when he got beneath the skin.

Unless the condition of Jeffries continues to improve steadily, the fight will be declared off. The probable definite postponing of the battle is greatly worrying the champion, as he feels that the impression will go around that he is permanently out of business.

Aside from the knee trouble, Jeff is in pretty fine shape. His forced rest put a good deal of weight on him, but he figures he can carry this additional beef without serious interference with his fighting qualities.

MRS. JEFF WORRIED.

Mrs. Jeffries was not present during the operation. She is greatly distressed over her husband's condition. While the doctor was at work she remained in her room alone. Billy Delaney and Big Joe Kennedy, Jeff's sparring partners, watched the physicians.

When the leg of the champion was properly bandaged, Delaney said: "It is utterly impossible to say definitely when Jeffries will be able to enter the ring. The doctor tells me that he will be in good shape in four or five days. If his knee thoroughly heals during that time, he will be able to enter the ring on the night of the 30th. But we can't tell for certain anything."

MUNROE CHAFES AT DELAY IN BIG FIGHT

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Jack Munroe is displaying his first symptoms of uneasiness. It is not over the prospect of fighting Jim Jeffries, however, but for fear that there will be no contest at all, and that all the hard training will go for nothing. As long as things went swimmingly at both camps Munroe seemed perfectly emotionless on the subject of world's championship battles. He boxed and pulley-hauled in a humdrum way, and might have been preparing himself for a game of bowls for all the eagerness or excitement that was apparent in him.

Now there is a cloud on his terra cotta brows, and his trainers are thinking up reassuring things to say to him. Incidentally the trainers themselves are rather skeptical since they heard that Jeffries' knee had to be operated upon. It may be said with truth that the whole Munroe camp is anxious for a few days to pass quickly in order that definite news may be received from the bedside of the champion relating to his condition to defend his laurels on the night of the 30th.

But we can't tell for certain anything."

MUNROE KEEPS WORKING.

Meanwhile Munroe will continue his training with very little variation from the usual schedule. On the day that news of Jeffries's setback arrived, Munroe was down to 200 pounds, and the intention was to keep him there until within a day of the contest. "He is eating sloppy food and is indulging his appetite for things he likes," said Tim McGrath. "He works so hard and perspires so easily that there is no occasion to give him a training table diet. When the time comes he will shorten up on liquid stuff and will dry out easily to 200 pounds, at which weight we will send him into the ring." This was several days ago. Now Munroe weighs 216 pounds. McGrath and Roche saw at once that it would not do to keep the hard working miner at his low notch, and they eased off in his training and allowed the extra weight to accumulate. Our purpose is to have Munroe remain big until something definite is learned in regard to the prospect of holding the match on June 30."

MUNROE LIKES WATER.

Meanwhile Munroe will do a certain amount of road work and spar a few rounds daily with the members of his heavyweight band. He will be permitted to disport himself to his heart's content in the waves, a pastime in which he takes particular delight. It is one of the sights of Camp Munroe just now to watch Jack Munroe bucking the centre of the incoming rollers.

Tim McGrath and those who are assisting him in handling Munroe say the miner is the most tractable heavyweight they ever had to do with. He is as docile as a well-broken-natured St. Bernard and follows instructions without a whimper.

"What more would there be in being otherwise?" said Munroe when these matters were discussed in his presence. "It is McGrath's business to put men into condition, and the only way to get the full benefit of what he knows is to do what he tells me to do."

JACK TO BE CHAMPION.

McGrath, with that modesty for which he is proverbial, says that Munroe's natural disposition has all to do with it.

"He is a great Jack" said Tim. "If he is cheerful coming in off the road and cheerful when he is doing some of the big husky turns that roll up here every day. He is cool and reasonable and I am sure he will be an easy man to direct when he is fighting. I'll make this prophecy, too. Jack Munroe becomes champion of the world—and he surely will—he will be the most popular champion the ring has had since John L. Sullivan."

McCOY SAYS FITZ SHOULD BEAT JACK

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, June 16.—With his skin tanned to ebony hue, Kid McCoy has returned to New York for a few hours from the country where he has been roughing it for the past couple of weeks. He intends to remain here only long enough till he is back to his old form. The Hoosier boxer came to town rather unexpectedly on some legal business, but he found time to look into the pugilistic situation and was very much interested in the signing of articles by Fitzsimmons and Jeffries. McCoy was pleased to hear that the pair had finally agreed to terms for a fight as he will be prepared to enter the ring. In the meantime, McCoy will continue his outdoor life in an effort to take on weight and build himself up so that he will be able to tackle all comers this fall.

McCoy has adopted a novel plan to get into condition. He has pitched camp out on many miles on the Hudson river, where he spends a regular life and takes considerable exercise during the day. He believes that, with a couple of months' active work, he will be in better shape physically than ever before. He will return to the city next month to be at the ringside and challenge the winner of the O'Brien-Fitzsimmons fight.

"Yes, I would like to get a crack at Fitzsimmons," said McCoy, "but I want to be right when I tackle him in the ring. You know Fitz is a tough proposition and unless a fellow is right with the goods it will not bother to go very far. I am going to get into condition and I feel sure that I can defeat all of those fellows. I will be on deck if Fitz O'Brien and Fitz Simmons fight comes off and will challenge the winner. Fitz can have a fight with me a month or two after his go with O'Brien, providing he makes a good showing over the Philadelphian, which he should have no trouble in doing."

B. C. PREP LOSE GAME

Woburn High School proved too fast for the Boston College prep team, at the City Park, Woburn, winning out 8 to 3. Foley did the slab work for the prep boys and kept the hits well scattered, but the poor support gave his opponents most of their runs.

At the end of the third inning neither side had scored. In the fourth two errors by O'Hern at third gave Woburn her first tally, and after that, although Foley pitched splendid ball, his support was poor and Woburn kept adding to her score.

Foley's pitching under adverse circumstances, and the Fielding of Manning, who captured two difficult flies in centre field and assisted in a pretty double play, were the features of the game. The score:

Woburn High.....	0	0	0	3	0	3	2	0	—8
B. C. Prep.....	0	0	0	0	1	2	0	0	—3

Batteries—Woburn, Morrinan and McGann; B. C. Prep, Foley and Wennerburg.

Old Saugus track is in splendid shape. All the trainers were out in force yesterday. About seventy-five horses are being worked here, and many of them are entered in the Nahant races

CREWS BOTHERED BY ROUGH WATER

Special to the Boston American.

HARVARD CREW QUARTERS, RED TOP, Conn., June 16.—The Thames River was covered with white caps blown up river by the stiff southwest breeze, so the Harvard crews did little work this morning.

All of the crews went out in their regular order, the same as yesterday. Bowditch, who has been home with German measles, is expected at quarters to-morrow afternoon, and if is expected he will be back at bow in the four-oar by Monday.

The varsity went down to the two-half-mile flag off Cow Point and back and added improvement was noticed, the shell keeping on a more even keel.

The freshman and second Varsity and four-oar crews worked out light, and it is expected that they will be given a time row this evening, providing conditions are favorable.

TIME ROWS FOR YALE CREWS TO-NIGHT

YALE CREW QUARTERS, GALES FERRY, Conn., June 16.—The three Yale crews did little work this forenoon, owing to high wind and rough water in the river. The freshmen were given a mile paddle up river at 10 o'clock. Blair was in at bow, and Danielson was at No. 3.

Carl Adams, the head coach, who has been suffering from malaria, was out in the launch for the first time this week. The two four-oar crews did a half-mile and back in quarter-mile stretches. The Varsity went one mile up in the cove.

The three crews will be sent down the course on time this evening.

BIG MEET OF BIKE RIDERS

Following popular acclaim, the management of Charles River Park will put on an open-paced race for a feature holiday event to-morrow afternoon. For this occasion all the available talent that has made a good showing behind pace will be on the scene of conflict.

Harry Caldwell, the New Hampshire giant, has recovered from the injury to his arm, and will be on deck ready to prove that he is yet the peer of the bunch. His practice stunts show that he is back with the form that astonished the cycling world last season.

George Leander will come over from New York, and will have a chance to prove that he is Caldwell's master, while Bill Stinson, writhing under the defeats by Mocrin in his last races, will show his legion of Cambridge admirers that he is a factor for first money.

Little Louis Mottling has caught the crowd by his sharp foot work, and every body knows that ill-luck has kept him from figuring in the top prize. Basil de Critchard is due to be in the running at this stage of the racing, and will plug for all he is worth. Paisley Keegan of Lowell is another youngster that is likely to create trouble before the end comes. Amateur and motor events will give the make up a grand card of racing.

WILL ROW IN HENLEY RACES

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lou Scholes, the champion amateur single sculler of America and Canada, sailed for England on the steamer Cedric to take part in the Henley regatta. Scholes was accompanied by P. J. Mohgenn and M. P. Mallon of the Toronto Rowing Club. He is a son of J. F. Scholes, of Toronto, a former well-known amateur athlete, and his brother, Jack Scholes, is the champion lightweight boxer of the world.

Edward Durham, a nephew of Edward Haulan, went with the party. He is a professional single sculler and will meet Tom Sullivan, the champion of England, in a race on the Thames. Durham was instructed in the art of rowing by Haulan, and is about as old as Haulan was when he his prime.

CHAMPS' EYES NEED GLASSES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, June 16.—If Collins' Champs don't wake up a little and do more work with their sticks they won't be always in the lead of the American League race.

They have shown no great ability to wield the ash effectively in a long while, and Jimmie is getting anxious.

Their former mate, Altrock, held them safe all the way through in the first game here, and Comiskey says Owen will do the same this afternoon.

It's likely Dineen will be sent in by Manager Jimmy to try to land the second scrap.

SALEM FANS ALL EXCITED

Salem and Lynn semi-professionals, the 10-inning record holders, will clash on the Bridge street grounds in Salem to-morrow afternoon. The contest of last Saturday has aroused the baseball fans in old Salem and it is safe to say that a big crowd will be present on Bunker Hill Day. Leahy, the South Boston pitcher, and Harrington, the old English High catcher will form the battery. O'Reilly, Sherlock, Minton, will play the bases with Chandler at short stop. Pinger, Goode and Greene will look after the gardens.

MINOR LEAGUE SCHEDULE.

NEW ENGLAND.

Contest at Lawrence, Haverhill at Manchester, Fall River at Nashua, New Bedford at Lowell.

EASTERN.

Rochester at Providence, Montreal at Baltimore, Toronto at Newark, Buffalo at Jersey City.

GAME ON PIERCE FIELD.

A warm game will be played on Pierce Field, Roslindale, to-morrow afternoon, between the Jamaicas and Working Boys' Home. Francis Kelly will do the box work for the Jamaicas and McMillen will be on the receiving end.

THREE GOOD CHICAGO COLTS

Here are the pictures of three men who have done much to place the Chicago Colts in such a high position in the race. They are Chance, the big first baseman, and Pitchers Corridon and Briggs. All are fine players and earnest workers for the good of the club.

CHANCE. CORRIDON. BRIGGS.

AMHERST'S BIG HITTERS.

PROVIDENCE, June 16.—Amherst's ball tossers had their eyes on the ball and whanged the curves of Pitt, of Brown, good and plenty. The local collegians also swatted the sphere well, but their fielding was very yellow. The score read: Amherst, 8; Brown, 3.

IRISH LAD LIKED FOR THE SUBURBAN

By J. S. A. MacDONALD.

NEW YORK, June 16.—This is Suburban Handicap Day, and the opening of the annual Summer meeting of the Coney Island Jockey Club at Sheepshead Bay. Apart from the grand spectacle, and the still grander racing which will be seen this afternoon, not one race-goer and horse-player but will be glad to get away from Gravesend.

In many respects the Suburban handicap of this year will go down in turf lore as distinctly disappointing. The Brooklyn handicap of this year had a much more representative field, and in the light of the Gravesend special, the big race to-day pales decisively. Methuselah, Waterboy and Hamburg Belle would have given the event the distinction it deserves. However, it will be one of the greatest races of modern times, with Irish Lad once again the standard bearer of half the racing world.

The track is very fast. The Suburban handicap of a mile and a quarter is one of the most popular races of the year. It is said The Picket won his last race because Irish Lad and Hermis ran themselves into the ground out in front in the first mile. The Picket won, all out, by a scant margin. The Picket packed 118 pounds in that race, but he takes up six pounds more to-day, 124 pounds.

That extra six pounds will count, despite the declaration of Carroll Reid, that his colt is the best weight carrier in the handicap class hereabouts.

Irish Lad and Hermis are in at 127 pounds each. It is reasonable to suppose that Irish Lad and Hermis will set a terrific pace again, and that The Picket will be closing on them at the end. This time The Picket will not have so much in him at the end, while Irish Lad will put up a more vigorous finish on the big colt. Hermis is ten pounds better than he was a fortnight ago.

It is a three-cornered race, as African doe is dead for and Major Daingerfield has not the speed. Proper was lucky to beat him in the Brooklyn handicap, while Shortlose might as well stay in the barn. Irish Lad is the best class here and should win, with Hermis second and The Picket third.

CHICAGO COLTS SURPRISED BY THE HUB MEN'S SHOWING

There will be some hard going at the National Park this afternoon, if thewords of Manager Frank Selee ring true. He says his nine will win to-day at all hazards. He alleged the same thing yesterday, but his nine lost. However, he says yesterday has past and it is to-day's game he is looking for.

The reason that the Colts were not very disappointed at losing the game was that the Giants lost and the Reds lost twice. If they had beaten the home aggregation yesterday they would have sailed into first place. However, if they should win to-day, and New York loses, they will regain the pinnacle of fame.

That is why Selee is extra anxious to win out to-day. His men have been counseled to play the ball to-day and they will let no chance go that will help them to get a run across the plate. So anxious are they to come out victoriously to-day, that Evers, who was injured in the opener, will be again in the fray, according to the boss.

Evers's ankle is about well, and he requested Selee to let him get into the battle. He is looking in fine condition and says he feels in the best of shape. As he will be back in the game, Williams, who has been taking his place at the second station, will go in the centre garden.

This change will greatly strengthen the team. "With the men playing in the proper places," said Selee, "we should not have any difficulty in taking the final game from the Bostons."

"After the reports from the Pittsburg series came to us we expected to have an easy time of it in Boston. The plucky playing of the home nine surprised us very much. The way they played yesterday would beat the fastest teams that ever shot down the pike. They have been playing championship ball the past two days, and if they continue their good work, I predict a place in the first division for them. At least they can make it pretty hot for the teams touted for pennant honors.

"I like to see Boston teams make out well, because all my heart interest is in one focused on this burg. This is a great town and nothing can come too good for it."

Burt "Buttons" Briggs will most likely be used in the box this afternoon. He has plenty of speed and could prove rather puzzling to the home talent, if they haven't their batting lamps with them. If he doesn't warm up well, Selee will send Carl Laughlen in the rubber. At any rate, he hopes to pull out a victory this afternoon.

PROHIBITIVE PRICE PUT ON FRED TENNEY

Things are breaking all right for the Jacksonville leaguers and the practice this morning gave evidence that they meant business.

It was a stiff jaunt on the field, as the Colts will have to be fenced in again before very long to keep them from Hoboken.

Tom Fisher is well oiled up for the fray. Plenty of extra work between games had put Tom on edge and he has all kinds of speed and can curve a ball, too.

Captain Tenney wants to make it three straight, and was proud of his looking the equipment over to see there was nothing lacking.

The story that he is sought for by the Pirates has some foundation, but the price for his services is almost prohibitive at present.

Delehanty is still on the shelf, and Pat Moran will frolic around the third pillow. You Pat does like to work. There is not a harder digger on the team. "Pat" will go in harness for the holiday, says Buck, and then the infield will be intact.

Between the Innings.

Two straight from the far-heralded Colts is not doing very badly. It seems to the fans that the Reds lost to the Pirates.

Willis, executing in the first inning, pitched one of the best games ever seen in this city.

Eight of the Cubs were victims of Willis's speedy and curry shoots.

The only misplay of the Bostons was Dowd's muff of Dolan's fly ball in the first. This can be excused, as he has a sore finger.

Needham threw remarkably well to the bases considering his bad fingers.

The rally in the ninth was a hot one, and for a time it looked as though anything in the battle. When Wilts at the beginning of the inning hit Dolan on the hand, Dolan thought he had a broken arm. There was no rub and when the cauterizing ended, with Dolan still in the game, Nolan of the fatal left the grounds, until after the grand finale.

Moran on third is doing finely, and the way he handles the ball is somewhat like Dowd's, with a little on the side. As it is, he is playing fast ball.

CRACK HORSES IN SPEEDWAY RACES

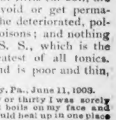
BOILS

PYRAMIDS OF PAIN



Boils show the blood is in a riotous, feverish condition, or that it has grown too weak and sluggish to throw off the bodily impurities, which then concentrate at some spot, and a carbuncle or boil is the result. To one already enfeebled by disease, boils seem to come with more frequency, causing the intensest pain and greatest danger to the already weak and debilitated sufferer. All skin eruptions, from the sometimes fatal carbuncle to the spiteful little cat-boil, are caused by bad blood, and the only way to avoid or get permanently rid of them is to purify and build up the deteriorated, polluted blood, and counteract the humors and poisons; and nothing will do this so quickly and thoroughly as S. S. S., which is the acknowledged king of blood purifiers and greatest of all tonics. Where the blood has become impoverished and is poor and thin, no medicine acts so promptly in building up and restoring its rich-ness, purity and strength. The time to cure a boil is before it develops, when it is in a state of incubation or formation in the blood; for boils are, after all, only the pimples and poisons bubbling up through the skin, and this will continue in spite of poulticing and lancing till the blood gets rid of its accumulated poison. The way to stop boils is to attack them in the blood, and this is what S. S. S. does, and danger of boils is past when the blood has been made thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all morbid, impure matter. If you are subject to boils, then the same cause that produced them last season will do so this, and the sooner you begin to put your blood and system in good order the better the chance of going through the spring and summer season without boils or other painful and irritating skin eruptions. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and can be taken with perfect safety by old and young, and without harm to the most delicate constitution.

It is mild and pleasant in its action, and unequaled as a cure for boils and kindred eruptions. Write us if you would like medical advice.

Allegheny, Pa., June 11, 1903.

From the age of twenty or thirty I was sorely afflicted with large, awful boils on my face and body. As soon as they were healed up in one place they would break out in another part of the body, and this continued for two years. I tried everything I could hear of to get relief, but nothing did me any good. I had but little faith in S. S. S. when one good when I began it, but after taking it for a short while the boils began to disappear, I continued on with the medicine, taking a bottle, and all the boils entirely disappeared. Five years have elapsed since that time, and I have only had one boil during that time, and the cure was permanent. I had some thirty or forty of the most painful boils one ever had, and to be entirely rid of them by your great purifier, S. S. S., puts me under a debt of gratitude to you.

WHO IS THE PRETTIEST GIRL IN BOSTON?

FIVE HANDSOME CANDIDATES IN BOSTON AMERICAN'S BEAUTY CONTEST

HERE are five more Boston girls, who, it is evident from their photographs, are well qualified to go before the great jury of AMERICAN readers that is to decide the interesting question: "Who Is the Prettiest Girl in Boston?" Interest in this competition is growing apace, and photographs of beautiful young women of this city are coming in rapidly. They will be published from time to time for the delectation of the readers of the AMERICAN. All the charming Boston girls who feel that their claims to the foremost place in the contest ought to be recognized should send their photographs to the AMERICAN at once, so that the friendly and discriminating jury may get an early opportunity to pass upon their pretty features. To-day's candidates include two sisters, the Misses Gould.

MISS JESSIE DOYLE.

Pretty Girls of Boston!

SEND IN YOUR PHOTOGRAPHS.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN has been asked by numerous correspondents to name the prettiest girl in Boston. The question is herewith passed along to the readers of the AMERICAN for them to decide. A half hour's walk on any of the leading streets in our city, in the Common, the Public Garden, the Parks, Commonwealth avenue and in the adjacent suburbs, discloses the fact there are more pretty young women and girls to be found in and about Boston than in any other city in the United States.

So that the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN may form themselves into a great jury to decide the question, we request that photographs, properly authenticated, be sent to the BEAUTY EDITOR, BOSTON AMERICAN Office, 80 and 82 Summer Street.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Dressing Gown.

In the illustration shown, the gown can be made up either as a dressing or negligee gown. The pattern provides for flowing bishop sleeves, but for negligee wear, circular back and side cuffs will be the choice of many. The pattern is cut in only enough different sizes to avoid even the faintest clumsiness in design or make, being held in the back by ribbons or cord girdle. The back is made with a yoke, which opens from the center, adding much to the ease of dressing, while the sleeves give the newest shaping, and may be made in flowing or bishop style. The neck is slightly V-shaped and finished by a ripe collar, which gives the fashionable drooping shoulder effect. The normal waist line is at the low-ered line, and the skirt is in nine gores, ar-ranged that, with the ripple which may be made upward from the bottom, a perfect, with the reversal of fingers shows many of the outline lines, made of this above material in dotted lines. Pattern drawn for 36-inch bust measure. Price 10 cents. Send for Spring and Summer Catalogue of Fashions and Dress Goods.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail a pattern of the above on receipt of 10 cents to cover all cost of handling, etc. In ordering, mail allowance for WRITE PLAINLY. AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 2905, Boston, Mass.

Girls, Use Your Brains as Well as Hearts.

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl falls in love with a man and promises to marry him she sometimes loses sight of the fact that life is not all romance.

Her heart runs away with her head; she loves the man, but she doesn't know why she loves him. She looks only on the bright side of the shield. He is manly, good looking and devoted to her; that is enough for her.

She forgets that many qualities go toward the making of manliness; that good looks don't last, and that the devotion depends largely on her ability to hold it.

What she should do is to bring brain as well as heart to bear on the subject.

She should say to herself, "If this man grows old and poor and ugly, will I love him just as well as I do to-day? If he is unsuccessful in business, will I love him well enough to stand by him, faithful and true through good report and ill? Do I respect as well as love him?"

The love between husband and wife that rests on a basis of mutual respect will bring much peace and happiness in its train.

Don't marry a man because he has a handsome face, girls, or because he sings love songs with feeling.

Beauty and love songs won't keep the domestic machinery running smoothly. Never marry a man unless you love him, but when you find yourself falling in love, find out if he is blessed with the sterling quality of common sense, and if he is, so much the better for you.

Too much sweetness cloys, and the girl who imagines she can hold a man by sentiment alone is much mistaken.

Men want love, but they also want solid comfort. Kisses won't make up for bad coffee and words of endearment will not compensate for untidy housekeeping.

The same rule applies with husbands. A man cannot neglect his wife for weeks and then expect to smooth things over by kissing her and telling her how he loves her.

If young people would only look on matrimony from the practical as well as the romantic side there would be less separation and divorce in the land.

To Freshen Black Lace or Muslin.

SPREAD the lace out on a sheet of paper and brush it carefully with a soft brush, then shake it to free it from as much dust as possible.

If it is spotted or stained in any way, rub it gently with a sponge dipped in cold tea, and then allow the lace to soak for at least half an hour in tea prepared in the following manner: Put into a small, lined saucepan one teaspoonful of gum arabic, one dessertspoonful of dry tea and a pint of boiling water.

Simmer these slowly over the fire, stirring occasionally until the gum is dissolved and then strain into a basin.

The gum arabic in the tea will give a slight stiffening to the lace.

If the lace is made of silk, one teaspoonful of alcohol may be added to the other ingredients, which will help to give the silk a gloss. This is also a good way to soften black muslin.

After the lace has been soaked in the above preparation for the necessary time squeeze it gently between the hands and then in the folds of a cloth, or fold it carefully in a cloth and put it through the wringer.

Pull out all the points with the fingers, roll the lace in a dry cloth and let it remain at least an hour before ironing. When about to iron spread a sheet of kitchen paper, smooth side uppermost, on a piece of double felt or thick ironing blanket; spread the lace smoothly on top of this and place another piece of paper, with the glossy side downward, on the top.

Iron rough side of the paper is placed next the lace it will peel off in small pieces, from the lace carefully on the top of the paper with a cool iron, and when partly finished remove the paper, pull out the points of lace and then iron again with the paper over.

Never touch the lace with the bare iron, as any glazing would quite spoil its appearance. When quite dry hang up the lace to air. The washing and dressing of lace is certainly a work which requires time and care; it cannot be hurried over, but it is interesting and nothing better repays for the time and labor bestowed upon it.—Exchange.

Advice About the Hair.

HAIR experts say that if women keep on wearing pompadours it is only a question of time before they become bald. To be sure, it will not be quite so far-reaching as a man's, but bad enough to destroy their good looks.

Because the hair has been somewhat neglected in this respect in the part do not work on the principle that it a certain amount of care is beneficial a good deal will do wonders; heroic measures almost always prove disastrous. Coax, but do not force matters, as too frequent, brushing and other manipulations of the hair irritate the scalp and cause the hair to fall out. Hair which is scrupulously clean but very stubborn in its habit of growth needs training instead of shampooing, a common error in this day of good grooming. Close observation will soon teach one the difference between fluffy hair and that which is extremely dry. Never under any circumstances allow the hair to remain at night in the coil or plaits worn during the day, for injury is done the scalp and the hair soon assumes awkward lines, from the hours of pressure in the wrong direction. Before retiring, brush the hair thoroughly and combine it in one or two very loose plaits. This will insure a free circulation of air through the hair and relax the delicate muscles of the scalp, which are more or less irritated by the pressure of numerous pins and the weight of the hair confined largely at one point. To assist in the training moisten the hair with a little good tonic, such as a preparation of quinine and bay rum containing a small per cent of oil, and brush in the desired direction each time brushing is done.

THE Stepmother OR TWO LITTLE SAILOR BOYS

Adapted From Walter Howard's Play, "TWO LITTLE SAILOR BOYS."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Admiral Grey, who has recently married a young woman, has two children who do not like her—Cyril, a boy of fifteen, and Mildred, who is in love with the young captain of her father's ship, Noel Trevarrion. He comes to ask for her hand. Lieutenant Rushmore, of the same ship, is also in love with her and secures the assistance of Tom Foster, an old sailor, to help him elope with her. Tom Foster, to whom he gives a glass of toddy, tells Noel Trevarrion the story of his friend, Tom Yorke's, death in the war with the Filipinos, and that he had sworn to find his son and give him a home.

Rushmore, Foster, Jack Rushmore, and Lucy, the lieutenant's man, to marry him. Jim Rushton, a thief, is also concerned in the plot, and Mrs. Grey and Geraldine are supposed to be in league to help him steal. Tom, through fright, is induced to sail without the Grey family. Lucy discovers him and recognizes Royston, who tells her that she is to marry Rushmore. Meanwhile Jack and Cyril, dressed as pages, are sent to the cabin of Admiral and Mrs. Grey to assist Trevarrion of the theft and has him arrested.

Mrs. Grey has a meeting with Royston, whom she has known before. He threatens to tell what he knows unless she will help him to make away with her son. She asks time, but he refuses.

Her father comes in and asks the reason of Rodney's dismissal. Milly is desperate, but Noel enters and tells of his love. The Admiral rebukes him for his conduct, and Noel goes. Left alone with Milly, Arthur begs her to run away with him. She refuses, but finally consents. He tells Mrs. Grey another lie and begs to be allowed to stay.

The next morning Jim tells him if he will get the papers from Jim Foster she will run away with him. Arthur and Mrs. Grey begin to try the detective business together. They begin on the robbery of Tom Admiral's.

"DON'T say that!" the child pleaded. "I won't trouble you, nor disgrace you. I won't ask you again to let me be your little boy. Only let me be your servant and the servant of a little boy I have here. I'll never tell a soul if I can only see you sometimes. "O!" the pleading voice was broken by sobs. "I have been so lonely. All my life I have wanted a mother. Won't you say one kind word to me, just to keep my heart from breaking? Kiss me just once and I'll go and never trouble you again as long as I live!"

Mrs. Grey, moved against her better judgment by the pitiful figure, the pitiful appeal of the creature, the pitiful words, her eyes wandering in apprehension that some one might enter and demand the reason for the presence of the sobbing child. Stooping at the window, her wandering gaze was caught and held by the sail sweep of the river. She looked suddenly about at the conversing boy.

"Come here!" she said softly.

The boy went to her, wistful but half afraid. The woman laid her hand on his shoulder and spoke in an undertone.

"Do you know where Jim Foster is?"

"Yes, he's at the Black Dog on Water street. That's where he always puts up."

Mrs. Grey put her questions in breathless haste.

"Does he drink?"

"Yes, he's never sober when he's there."

"You know he stole a packet of papers when he was here?"

"Yes. When he was drunk he showed 'em to me—said them papers would make a fortune."

Mrs. Grey placed both hands upon the boy's shoulder, drew back a pace and looked eagerly into his eyes.

"With those papers he can ruin me."

"I wouldn't let him do that. I'd kill him before he should hurt you."

"Would you face danger for my sake, Tom?"

"When you speak like that I'd do anything for you."

"Look!" she swept back the lace draperies at the window with an imperious hand. "You see that bridge?"

"Sure!"

"Then go to the Black Dog, get those papers for me, and bring them to me."

"Here! No! No! There on the bridge. Do you see where I am pointing? At the middle arch? I will meet you there at 9 o'clock. Will you do it?"

"I will do anything for you."

"Then go!" She pushed him with nervous hands toward the open window.

"Yes, he's never sober when he's there."

"You know he stole a packet of papers when he was here?"

Mrs. Grey placed both hands upon the boy's shoulder, drew back a pace and looked eagerly into his eyes.

She leaned forward and pressed a hasty kiss upon his forehead.

"God bless you!" Tom walked stealthily to the window, with the cautious tread of the thief, then turned to look back at her, his pointed little face transfigured, a sob of gratitude in his voice.

"My mother!"

CHAPTER XVII.

A Crocodile in Petticoats.

"YES."

When despondent Benjamin Baxter always dropped into the Hibernian-ian that was only his by association.

He was telling the story of his sorrows to a former mate of his on the police force.

"Yis. Dismissed from the force; dismissed from everything, without a cint and without a character, all because I fell in love with a chrocodile in petticoats.

"Well!" Benjamin Baxter was female, "I'm not the first great man who has come to grief through loving a woman, and I don't suppose I shall be the last."

The ex-mate on the police force expressed his sympathy by a mere grunt, after the manner of most men, and passed on to see what else was on tap in the Hibernian-ian rooms. I heard that they find places for girls. But what are you here for?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young man who has led a very worldly life has fallen in love with me. I am not yet twenty years old, and I truly like him in a friendly way. He tells me I can make a man out of him. He has not drunk, nor has he been out with any of his former acquaintances since meeting me. I feel as if I were under obligations to the world in general to marry this young man, as it means the saving of his soul and name. Do you think I should do this? DOUBTFUL.

Exeter, N. H.

DO not be foolish about this. Pity is not love, nor can you be happy with a man whom you cannot respect. If this man loves you, let him prove it by continuing for at least a year to live as a gentleman should. Until he has proved to you that he is able to resist the temptation to go back to his former life, I should have little to do with him. If he does not care enough for you now to reform permanently, it is doubtful if he will do so later.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, twenty-two years of age, am in business for myself, and have to travel most of the time. While travelling I stop in a certain city at a private house, as I am personally acquainted with the people of the house. There is a young lady in the family of about twenty years, of whom I think a great deal. She and her parents also seem to think a great deal of me, as I am always welcome in their house and am always asked to call again, etc. Now, I have a brother who is two years my senior, and who is not even engaged yet to be married, and for this reason I am not trying to make any attempt to propose to the girl, as I would like to see my brother married first, and, besides, my parents will object to it.

Do you think I am right in waiting, although it is very hard for me? J. B.

Boston.

IF you wait until your brother gets married, you may remain a bachelor the rest of your life. Your parents will resign themselves to the inevitable when they learn that you truly love the young lady. However, you are young enough to wait awhile. If you would rather do so, and it would only serve to increase your love for the young lady. If you wait it would also put you in a better position financially, but there is no reason why you should wait for your brother to get married.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, twenty-five years of age and am keeping company with a young lady one year my junior. We have been going together some time, and all has gone smoothly until lately. A short time ago we had a quarrel and since then she has acted very strange. In the presence of her lady friends she as often remarked that myself and chums are not all on her list if we do not desire to, and still she seems to put herself in places where I will be likely to meet her. She often tells me that she loves me when we are alone, but in the presence of others acts as if I were nothing to her. She says she does not care if I talk to other girls, and still she gets angry if I do. Do you think she cares for me, and how should you advise me to act toward her?

Boston. ANXIOUS.

I DO not think I should pay any attention to the way she treats you in public. Some girls take particular delight in treating the ones they care the most for in the worst possible manner before others. It seems to me, from what you say, that she cares a great deal for you, only she likes to tease you in the presence of others. Possibly if you took her at her word sometime and did not call for a few days, it would change her treatment of you.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl fifteen years old, and would you kindly give me your advice? There is a young man five years older than me, and he is a member of the same church I do in, and would it be proper for me to go out with him without my mother? My mother wants to know, as he is a very nice young man, and I do not like to hurt his feelings. G. J.

DO YOU know that think little girls of your age should not be going out with young men at all, or if they must go, they should always have their mother with them. You are too young, my dear. Can't you wait a year or so? You have lots of time for beaux and fun. If I were you, I would read and study and try to make myself as attractive and cultivated as possible. Then, when you are old enough to go out, you will attract a much better class of man than if you were ignorant.

BOSTONIANS' SEASON WILL BE EXTENDED

Three Attractive Musical Entertainments Still at the Theatres.

THE SUMMER AMUSEMENTS

ALTHOUGH the present has been announced as the closing week of the Bostonians at the Colonial Theatre, it was decided this morning to extend the run of the "Queen of Laughter" another week. This will be good news to the many admirers of this organization who have been unable to hear their latest production. The opera is now in splendid shape and is given a smooth and delightful presentation. Mr. Ratcliffe has made a big hit as the king, and by his performance has established his reputation as a comedian, while the singing of Miss Brown, Miss Zimmer and Mr. Macdonald gives much pleasure.

GLOBE THEATRE—It is seldom one sees such chorus work as is done in the "The Isle of Spice" at the Globe Theatre. Every member of this important division of the company sings and dances as if the success of the performance depended on its or her efforts alone, and that is one of the most spirited performance of the opera. Nor are the principals behind the chorus in their efforts, and the combination makes "The Isle of Spice" one of the most enjoyable Summer offerings that Boston has seen in a long time. There will be a special holiday matinee next Monday.

TREMONT THEATRE—"Woodland" seems to grow in popular favor at the Tremont Theatre with every performance. It is one of the most beautiful and attractive Summer productions, both to eye and ear, that has ever been made at a Summer house. New features are added to the opera every week, and all of them so far introduced have been successes from the beginning. The production is now in splendid working order, and is one that no one could fail to enjoy. It will be in all surprising if "Woodland" runs all Summer.

KEITH'S THEATRE—The bill at Keith's Theatre this week is a very attractive one and is well appreciated by the patrons of the house. Dr. Faden's act is very popular as ever, a state of affairs due both to their choice of selections and to their excellent playing. There are many other good features in the bill, among them the Lavine-Cimaron trio, Phil Rasbo and Jessie Burtman, the Three Madcaps, Edward Le Burton and Corney Brooks, Oliver P. Holden and Winifred Florence, and Stephen Townsend, the magician.

MUSIC HALL—Only a few opportunities remain for witnessing the enjoyable presentation of "Sky Farm" at Music Hall, as the engagement closes at the Saturday night's performance. It has been one of the most successful plays of the season at this theatre, and has given a great deal of pleasure to its patrons. The story is interesting and well told, and as a picture of rural life it is one of the best of its kind.

THE "POPS"—The "Pop" concert season is drawing to a close, as only one week after this present one remains to be given at Symphony Hall. It has been a most successful season from every point of view. The programmes, while popular in character, have for the most part been high in class, and their rendition has been very praiseworthy, while the support given the concerts by the Boston public must be gratifying. Some very attractive programmes are promised for the remaining concerts.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—"Paul Revere" is making one of the hits of the season at the Castle Square Theatre. There are some who take exceptions to the liberties the author has taken with history, but as the result is a stirring and interesting play, the audacity of these who object to it are quite content to simply applaud. The play is excellently well acted by the stock company, and the scenic presentation would be a credit to any theatre. Clarke's is announced for next week.

HOPE SQUARE THEATRE—"The Colonials" is proving a very popular play at the Scollay Square Theatre, and its able presentation by the stock company is warmly applauded at every performance. The play is an interesting one, dealing with events in this city at the time of the outbreak of the Revolution, and the interest in this week is very timely. It is carefully staged and is pleasing to the many people outside the regular clientele of the theatre.

HOWARD ATHENAEUM—The coming of Sousa seems to make no difference in the patronage at the old Howard, for large audiences have been in attendance at every performance, and the applause bestowed upon the vaudeville performers has been most generous. Toby Lyons has made a strong hit, and his associates in providing entertainment this week are among the best in their lines.

PALACE THEATRE—The show by the Summer stock company at the Palace Theatre is fully up to the standard of the Winter performances, and is affording pleasant entertainment to the many guests of this popular house. The burlesques this week are even better than usual and Apollo is attractive in character.

LYCEUM THEATRE—The Summer show at the Lyceum Theatre is proving a popular one, and there have been large houses at every performance this week, which have displayed warm appreciation of the work of the Butterfly Burlesquers and the stock company. The burlesques on "Erminie" and "Trilby" are very clever, taking as the olio is up to the mark.

AUSTIN & STONE'S MUSEUM—Not once in a decade does any feature arouse so much interest at Austin & Stone's Museum as have the baby incubators. They excite the attention of everybody, but are particularly interesting to mothers, who are offered every facility for inspecting their babies.

SHOWS AT THE SUMMER PARKS.

HARVARD'S OLDEST ALUMNUS 96 TO-DAY

REV. JOS. WARREN CROSS, CLASS OF '28, PROUD OF HIS ALMA MATER.

Rev. Joseph Warren Cross, of the class of 1828, the oldest living Harvard graduate and the only survivor of the graduation day which gave to the world such men as Robert C. Winthrop, Charles Chauncey Emerson, Henry Boedtker, George B. Hillard, and others whose names have stood for progressiveness in America, is today celebrating his ninety-sixth birthday at the home of his daughter, 66 Bradford street, Lawrence. Mr. Cross is a splendid specimen of aged manhood. He is an entertaining talker and has a mine of intelligence. He is proud of his alma mater.

"Harvard is the best educational institution in the country," he says, "and I owe her my best wishes. It is fifteen years since I have visited the old place of that time I dined with my classmates Winthrop at his home in Brookline. Great changes have taken place there since my time. John Thornton Kirkland was president. I spent every afternoon of our time in study. We had no football team, no athletic field and no boats racing. The only buildings were Old Massachusetts, Stoughton, Holworthy, Hollis, the Chapel and University Hall. In those days Harvard College had the appearance of the post-office centre of a small country town."

Mr. Cross was born in Boston. He entered Harvard at the age of sixteen, graduating in four years. He then entered Andover Theological Seminary. He is one of the oldest living alumnus, and was ordained as a Congregational minister in 1834. He retired from active work in the ministry in 1860.

PATTEN-THAYER WEDDING HELD AT LANCASTER

Gifts Worth $250,000 Feature of Brilliant Society Affair.

EXQUISITE DECORATIONS

Miss Anna Thayer, a daughter of Nathaniel Thayer, and William S. Patten, nephew of Mrs. Arthur Hunnewell, were married at noon to-day in the picturesque old Unitarian church of Lancaster in the presence of one of the most brilliant gath erings assembled at any society wedding this season.

The bridal presents were worth fully a quarter of a million dollars. They were also numerous.

The church was exquisitely decorated, the balconies being outlined in a rope of American smilax, interspersed with pink peonies. A thousand of the pink blossoms were thus entwined. In the huge old-fashioned pulpit, under which the Rev. George Hartell was stationed, were mantelfuls of smilax with exquisite pink orchids, inlaid through the fragrant mosses.

Miss Thayer is a tall, statuesque blonde strongly resembling her late mother. She wore a beautiful gown of white duchesse satin, with a trimming of rare point lace, the gift of the present Mrs. Thayer. She wore a long tulle veil fastened by a tiny light, high coiffure with a tiny sprig of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white orchids and orange blossoms. She was escorted to the altar by her father, Nathaniel Thayer. Miss Whickering was organist.

Maid of Honor and Bridesmaids.

Miss Cornelia V. R. Thayer, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids included another sister, Miss "Sally" Thayer, Miss Rosau Thayer, a cousin of the bride, who was maid of honor two weeks ago at the wedding of her sister, Katherine, to Howland Shaw; Miss Jane Sargent, Miss Hannah Stevenson, Miss Beatrice Blake and Miss Eleanor Scott. Their gowns, exactly alike, were of pink taffeta, and they wore picturesque hats of pink straw, garlanded with roses and lilacs. A quaint feature of the hats was a long veil of sheerest white tulle, edged with lace, which was draped at the back and hung almost to the shoulders.

The little flower girls were Miss Natalie Thayer, the young daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Thayer, and Miss Margaret Sargent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sargent. They made a pretty picture in their dainty gowns of white embroidered over pale pink taffeta. Their hats were of pink and they carried pink straw baskets filled with the palest pink sweet peas. The same flowers formed the bridesmaids' bouquets.

Randolph Glynn acted as best man, and Mr. Thayer had for his ushers Arthur Whitesides, Samuel D. Parker, Robert Homans, Arthur Adams, Charles Sumner Peters, N. Thayer Robb of New York, E. B. Thayer, Jr., Winthrop Ames, Austin Potter and Charles R. Sturgis.

Wedding Breakfast.

A breakfast followed at the homestead, the bridal party numbering 100. Mr. Thayer, father, were the young people received in the large red drawing room. They were assisted by Mrs. Thayer and Miss Thayer, down speaking to the terrace in front of a large marquee and other tents, which on the left and right side was banked to open.

On the mantels were huge vases of American beauty roses, while in large vases on the floor were pink peonies. Mrs. Thayer, who assisted in receiving, was in elegant toilet of white satin, and wore a tiara pearls.

She wore a long rope of pearls, and in her corsage bouquet nestled many diamonds. Hunnewell, aunt of the groom, was beautifully gowned in white satin and lace, and quisite lace. The breakfast was served in the large dining room, the beautiful terrace from the drawing room, and the small tables were placed on the lawn. The floor of the house was also utilized.

The Salem Cadet Band furnished a splendid programme. The tables, spread on the terrace, seated some twenty-five persons each. The decorations were on the lawn, used in great quantities.

The bridal party were served on the balconies inside the white and gold dining room. The bride's table was the centre of bridal party, with Mr. and Mrs. Howland Russell, the latter a sister of Mrs. Thayer, whose marriage was an affair of particular gaiety.

Colonel and Mrs. John E. Thayer entertained the bridal party with a dinner at the home of the bride and his sister, Miss Nina Thayer, at dinner last evening.

Profusion of Gifts.

Mrs. Thayer devoted two rooms of the upper story to the display of her daughter's gorgeous presents.

The groom gave her a superb diamond and emerald pendant, which was the only jewel she wore. The other gifts from Mr. and Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayer, chest of silver; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene V. Thayer, Jr., set of cut table glass of every description; Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, gold pierced candlesticks; Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Clark, two silver candlesticks; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mortimer Rankin, oxidized silver mirror; Mrs. Arthur Fraser, silver tea service; Mrs. Marion Fish, point lace parasol, with handle of gold; Mrs. Cecil Baring, point lace fan, set of books; Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, gold clock; Chaun Frank Hunnewell, set of books; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Morse, silver inkstand; Lieut. Cecil Baring, point lace fan, set of books; Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, gold clock; Chaun Frank Hunnewell, set of books; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Morse, silver inkstand; Lieut. Cecil Baring, point lace fan and gold spoon; a member of the Harvard Club of Boston, silver punch bowl and ladle.

The rest of the gifts included two large tables of silver, rings, necklaces, bracelets, watches, gold, silver and bronze vases, cut glass and silver glasses, a full set of Lowestoft china and another of Sevres, and gold silver candelabra pictures and a number of priceless rings.

Mr. and Mrs. Patten, after spending their honeymoon in Europe, will return and remain the greater part of the Summer, as to live in Wellesley.

ANSWERS SUIT OF $50,000,000

Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil millionaire, through his counsel, Alfred Hemenway, Walter I. Badger and Burrage & Hayden, to-day filed an answer in equity to the suit brought by Mrs. Hetty Green, widow of the famous inventor, for $50,000,000 royalty for the use of a patent process to render kerosene non-explosive.

Mr. Rogers denies the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts courts on the ground that he is a resident of New York. He also states that the suit is barred by the statute of limitations, and that the property in the suit are illegal by reason of the fact that when served with the writ Mr. Rogers was in the Pepper-Boston Gas Light suit, and as such was not liable to such service.

'SWEET LAND OF LIBERTY,' SING EXILED MINERS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ANTONIO, Col., June 16.—Ruthlessly torn from their homes and driven out of their own State at the point of the bayonet, thirty-six union miners and sympathizers, among them a man barely able to walk, marched by soldiers to the borderline and turned loose with less than a day's provisions on the edge of a desert, sang "Sweet Land of Liberty," as they watched the troops that had deported them disappearing. Then they walked back into Colorado.

As each man the soldiers handed two cans of beans and a loaf of bread. The men swore they would never to return to Colorado.

MAYOR HIBBARD'S GRAND ANNUAL AND NATIONAL HUNT TO-MORROW

Grand Annual and National Hunt Tomorrow, with Land of Clover Entered.

DISCARDED HORSE WINS

The biggest crowd yet is expected at one close of the Country Club races to-morrow. The club has a splendid card for the day, and the Grand Annual and the National Hunt Cup will be run off. Besides these two big events, besides several other good events. Mr. Chandler's Land of Clover, which won the Duke's cup yesterday; St. Jude and other crack steeplechasers are entered.

There are no races to-day on account of the Suburban handicap at Sheepshead Bay. The New York contingent and many Boston lans went over to New York last night to see the great event, and the entire race turf with its $20,000 prize. To-night and to-morrow morning they will hurry back.

The Country Club has been unusually lucky in regard to weather. The first two days were fair and cool. To-day's rain comes at just the right time, and with fair weather to-morrow the course will be all the better for the gentle wetting.

The most interesting event yesterday was the match race between Mr. Stoty Headmaster and Mr. Chandler's Adjidamus for a $250 steeplechase cup, over a two and a half mile course. Headmaster's victory was a popular one, for he is owned by Mr. Chandler, who once owned Headmaster, but sold him to Mr. Story for $1,000. Adjidamus was the owner's favorite chaser. But he made a poor showing at the finish, for he was the only one left standing after the owner's favorite had won by a victory yesterday.

The race was at exactly eight, 150 pounds. Silas Veitch rode for Mr. Chandler and Mr. Holder for Mr. Story. Head master set the pace from the start and won by ten lengths in 5.10.

The St. Botolph handicap steeplechase for $1,000 purse was won by William M. Kerr's bay mare Mamie H., E. Holder up. The Weeds steeplechase, for a $1,000 purse, was won by Joseph H. Wilcox's Poligio Donahue up.

Arthur Sweeney, George Keene, Mr. Barrett up, won the mile hack race for horses owned and ridden by Massachusetts Hunt Club members. The $500 purse for welter weights was taken by Mr. Sweeney on Clark's Old Fort. Mr. Clark up. The three-quarter mile race for local colts, for a $500 purse, went to The Cricket from Chelsea Stables, Babcock up.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 16, 1904.

Make a General Slocum Horror Impossible Here!

Out of the horror that ran through the country with the news of the General Slocum steamboat disaster in New York, there arose probably in most minds the old, old question: "Why should hundreds of innocent, helpless women and children lose their lives amid such agonies? What is the purpose of such visitations upon humanity?"

That question has been asked ever since the first disaster overwhelmed the children of men. It will be asked so long as humanity exists. It has never been answered. Doubtless it never will be. It is the useless, though natural, cry of the helpless.

A more practical, more important, more pressing question for to-day, and for Boston, is: "How can such calamities be avoided?"

It is the imperative duty of every man who is employed in any capacity in the management or actual running of every excursion steamer that leaves this city to ask that question and strive to answer it. It is the pressing duty of every Boston official who is supposed to supervise the running of such steamers to ask that question and see that it is answered in the best manner possible.

The investigation of the catastrophe by the New York authorities must be watched here with the keenest, clearest vision. Every bit of evidence that will throw a ray of light on the cause of the disaster must be examined, weighed and made use of. Every hint that may suggest precautions in these waters must be seized and followed.

The people in general must take the lead in the matter. Don't let steamboat men or officials lag or slip back into old ruts after the first spur of horror passes off. Follow them up and MAKE them ALL do their duty.

Hysteria or the sudden adoption of crude and ill-advised measures is not desirable. What IS wanted is the firm determination of the people of Boston that measure be taken with all possible speed to make it absolutely certain that a General Slocum disaster in or about Massachusetts Bay is impossible.

Greet Bunker Hill Day with Rejoicing!

It Is Boston's Own Holiday, and Deserves All Honor.

Boston and the surrounding cities and towns will celebrate Bunker Hill Day to-morrow with time-honored pageants and with general public rejoicings. Naturally, the focus of the popular demonstrations in honor of the day will be in Charlestown, where the historic battle was fought—and won by the nation that never remembers it with pride or joy.

Though the Charlestown demonstration will be different this year from previous ones, owing to the abandonment of the morning parade, there is every reason to believe that the general public jollification, with its many characteristic accompaniments, will be marked with more than usual fervor, while those in charge of the celebration promise to make up for the curtailment of the day features by providing extraordinary attractions for the electrical parade in the evening.

Charlestown will surely rise to the occasion and go in for a rousing good time, despite the city's action in furnishing less money than usual, putting into the popular rejoicing the spirit that breathed in the old Yankee answer to British sneers at Bunker Hill: "Well, perhaps we DID lose the battle, but WE'VE KEPT THE HILL."

The rest of the country may pass by the day with only a languid interest, and may be disposed to indulge in a quiet smile at Boston's enthusiasm over a day of defeat. Boston is right, however, and the other parts of the nation wrong in this. Citizens of New England, and of the Bay State particularly, have read history to some purpose when they realize and celebrate with the keenest zest the fact that on the first Bunker Hill Day both Great Britian and the colonists were taught that British regulars COULD be resisted, and their repeated attacks hurled back with terrible slaughter by the raw, undisciplined militia of America.

THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN VERY LITTLE OF THE REST OF THE COUNTRY TO FORGET BUNKER HILL IF THIS LESSON HAD NOT BEEN GIVEN AND LEARNED.

So the BOSTON AMERICAN urges the people of this city to pitch in to-morrow, celebrate their great anniversary with every outward sign of the intense patriotism that has always been theirs, and make the event all the more resplendent because the rejoicing is entirely their own, undiluted with outside sympathy or help.

Little Editorials from the People.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN welcomes its growing army of correspondents, who write their views on the many questions in which they are interested, but for the sake of all, and in order to give the hundreds who write to it a chance, it is requested that all make their "little editorials" very brief. Letters of from 100 to 200 words will speedily appear. Longer ones must wait, and are likely never to see the light.

DIVORCE AND THE CHURCH.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

There appears to be a union of ecclesiastical forces to stem the evils of divorce, by the enactment of church laws that will forbid the marriage of divorced persons. Will this have the desired effect? It is a dangerous business in this republic for the Church to attempt to override the State, or in accordance with whom beseemingly, the properly constituted judge upon the bench grants a decree of divorce, form the Church has no right to put any stigma upon such persons. The clergy of the different sects may refuse to marry divorced people, but all clergymen will not do this, and if they should do so, there would still be the civil marriage which alone is binding in the contract.

The clerical blunder consists in the churches they represent thinking that they represent the people to-day. They do not. The churches have lost their grip, not because the people are less religious, but because their course has driven them out or caused them to quietly slough off from religious organizations, so that now it is seriously believed by some that the "Church of God" is largest outside of the different denominations, in all of which there are some good Christians.

Many churches have degenerated into unsatisfactory clubs that, swinging a little social influence, are sought to be kept for its supposed benefits.

The church of God is a necessity. It is the moral police force of the spiritual world, but to retain its reverent recognition of its authority, it must win, not demand, and build upon the foundation stone, the "Rock Ages," God of the Fatherhood of God as the creator of all that is for man's benefit, and the correspondence of the brotherhood of man as represented by Jesus Christ, the great character-builder, whose perfect life followed by us will insure the eternal plan. FINDS FAULT WITH NATURE.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Nature is complimented often for such carelessness that nothing is made in vain. I sometimes wonder why she turned loose the vermiform appendix and not a few bacilli. Perhaps it was to give mankind a chance to progress in the practice of medicine and surgery. A better reason could be advanced if the pernicious and influential bugs only took up habitation in the corporosity of bad persons. But the good may have a larger colony in their interiors than the wicked. I do not wish to criticize Nature too harsh-y, but am convinced that she is the greatest experimentalist that I ever got within the range of my mental vision. I think that there are many things that she ought not to stand for, and that in some respects poor judgment has been shown in the equipment of both quadrupeds and bipeds. Why, for instance, in constructing the camel, did she not build the hunk of the ship of the desert with a hollow, and thus provide a natural saddle, instead of putting a hump on the spine that makes the rider long for the most terrific bounce that ever landed in Texas.

Dear Friends—My bandit captors have halted for the night. I fear it will go hard with me if the ransom does not arrive soon. Send a hurry call to Knox. They say they must have the dough or they will manicure my nails. Yours hopefully.

"Why, he's a new member and isn't used to it."

Says, "Make Moral Gladiators of Your Children."

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A mother has taken exception to some remarks of mine in these columns relative to a mother's unlimited power to make and mold a child's mind in the early years of childhood.

She tells me her own experience—how closely she kept her little son at her side and how she guided his thoughts into right channels, and then the result of his training when he came in contact with the realities of life. She says:

"My boy and I were comrades. We enjoyed the same books, same outings and same friends. But when the time came for him to go out and work for a living, was it just the same? Was his employer always or ever polite? Were his associates always honest and well meaning?

"Of course not, and my boy became at first grieved, and as he grew older cynical, until now, at twenty-six, he feels he can trust no one."

There is a vast difference between giving a man right ideals and making a "girl-boy" of him.

This mother evidently believed that innocence per se was to be found only in ignorance, and that she must keep all knowledge of the unpleasant side of life and human nature from her little boy as long as possible.

It would have been wiser had she mixed her excellent example and precept with good common-sense talks of boys and things.

As she taught him tasteful and tactful and refined habits, and polite and courteous manners, she should have said, "You will not find all men with whom you are thrown in business life, after you leave my side, as well brought up as I am bringing you. Many will be rough and coarse-mannered, and often you will encounter men of influence and position who have low standards and small sense of honor. But do not be swayed by their example. Remember that in the long run politeness, refinement and courtesy will pay you, as well as the fact that they are always agreeable qualities for others to encounter.

"Never forget that honesty is the only course for a man of any good judgment to pursue. Be sorry for the older men you meet, who have not found these things to be true, and keep to the course of conduct taught by me.

"If you meet a score of dishonest and disagreeable men when you first go into the world, do not be discouraged. There are other and better types in the world, and look for them until you meet them. Look in each one for the best quality he possesses and think about that. It will be more gratifying than to dwell morbidly on the unwholesome traits of humanity.

"Keep cheerful and do not worry too persistently over the evil in people. If you awaken evil yourself and live according to the law you would like others to observe you are doing all that God expects you to do, for you are setting an example for others to follow, besides adding to the morality and refinement of the world.

"It may not seem to bring you satisfactory returns at first, but as years pass by you will know you have chosen the only road for a sensible human being to tread who expects happiness."

This sort of conversation listened to periodically during childhood years, and accompanied with the training the mother says she gave her boy, would people the earth with strong, good men.

I do not believe in guarding either girls or boys from all knowledge of the wrong or error which exist in the world.

They must encounter it sooner or later, and it is far better that they learn something of it and know how to regard it before they are thrown into the great arena alone with the wild beasts of sin and vulgarity.

Teach them to be young moral gladiators by your home counsels and then have no fear to send them forth guarded and strengthened by your prayers.

There is nothing a wise, patient, common-sense mother cannot accomplish with her children. But she must begin early—before their birth—and the work must be like the dropping of water on the rock, steady and persistent.

Straws in the Stream.

He Knew It All.

You couldn't talk of anything
Whatever might befall:
The theatre, the shoot, the ring,
The book-world, politics, the war's
Developments, the course of stars—
But he would forth his wisdom fling—
Because he knew it all.

I couldn't bear him any more;
At outraged feelings's call
I sent him to the silent shore
An hour ago. I cannot tell
Where he has gone, to heav'n or hell—
It matters not. By now the bore
Is sure to know it all!

There is nothing a woman enjoys quite as much as the task of reforming a bad, bold man. Yet she seldom likes the tame result when she's successful.

QUESTION ABOUT A LOST CHECK.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I would like to know what is right in the following case. I deposit a number of checks, more than one of them for the same amount. A month afterward the bank informs me that one of them, with other checks sent in a letter to New York, was lost in transit. Thereupon the bank tells me to procure from the maker of the check and send to them a duplicate check, which I cannot do. So the bank deducts from my deposit the amount of said check. Is that right? The bank declares that it is, saying that a check has no particular value. Wish I had Rockefeller's for a million or so.

WORK OF HIGH TARIFF GREED.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The difference between a free trade policy and a politician's interference and discrimination (so-called protection) policy is the same as between an honest, able workman and a sneakthief. I know high tariff men who take great pains to find out where they can get their laundry done the cheapest by a Chinaman whom they pretend to believe should not be let into this country. The people should vote for honest and an honest tariff policy, and be done with the frauds forever. New England has lost the opportunity to trade with Canada by the selfishness and greed of the high tariff men, Ambition has overleaped itself.
